Holstein 'World Series' Sale Averages $8,207

Two-Bull Package Brings $100,000, Heifer Sells For $38,000

WOODSTOWN, N.J. — Holstein breeders and enthusiasts from across the continent packed the big tent at the Salem County Fairgrounds here Wednesday evening for the annual National Holstein Convention Sale.

Horace Backus, veteran Holstein stakeholder and pedigree reader at the event, characterized the international lineup of 72 lots.

"We're at the World Series," Backus said. The sale went on to average $8,207 per lot.

Buyers were offered a selection of high-profile cows, heifers, and embryos, as well as a clone calf and a bull package.

The offspring of two cows owned by Ernest Kueffner, Maryland, and Oseeana Holsteins, West Virginia, captured top dollars at the sale. Those dams are Tri-Day Ashlyn-ET, who is classified Excellent-96 and voted All-World 2002 by Holstein International; and Ernest-Anthony SD Tobi-ET, also EX-96.

Two bulls, EK-Oseeana Absolute Lee-ET (out of Ashlyn), and Tobis RB Temptation-ET (out of Tobi), nine months and not quite 14 months old, respectively, sold together for $100,000, the top-selling lot at the sale. Bred and owned by Kueffner and Oseeana Holsteins, they are housed at Browndale Farm in Canada.

The bulls were bought by Sure Bet Syndicate, a group of Holstein breeders and dairy producers from New Jersey and other states across the country.

EK-Oseeana Lee Abby-ET, a 9-month-old heifer calf also out of Ashlyn, sold for $38,000, making her top-selling female. The EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — South Dakota Federal District Court Judge Charles B. Kornmann ruled Friday, June 21, " ... The Beef Promotion and Research Act, and the Beef Order promulgated thereunder ... are unconstitutional and unenforceable because they violate the plaintiffs' rights under the First Amendment to the United States Constitution."

Judge Kornmann ruled further that there should not be "any further collection of beef checkoffs as of the start of business on July 15, 2002."

The reaction was swift from the Livestock Marketing Association (LMA) who brought the suit along with the Western Organization Resource Councils (WORC) and several individuals. Reaction was also prompt from the Cattlemen's Beef Board (CBB), USDA Secretary Ann Veneman and the National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA).

The defendants in the case are the USDA, the Cattlemen's Beef Promotion and Research Board, which administers the checkoff, and Nebraska Cattlemen, Inc., which has been heading a group of supportive producers to inter-

U.S. Ag Secretary Visits Lancaster

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — Late last week, U.S. Ag Secretary Ann Veneman visited the manufacturing facility of New Holland North America here to speak about her roots in Palmyra and about ongoing efforts to heighten food security and to implement the new Farm Bill.

The whirlwind tour included stops in St. Louis, Nebraska, Colorado, and New Holland. She also visited Wengert's Dairy in Lebanon.

Veneman was greeted by more than 200 farmers and agri-industry representatives at the town meeting conducted at New Holland North America. Also speaking were Paolo Monferino, chief executive officer of CNH; Tom Kennedy, president of CNH agribusiness worldwide; and Pennsylvania Ag Secretary Sam Hayes.

National Broiler Market At A Glance

Atlanta, Ga.
June 26, 2002
Report Supplied By USDA

Trade sentiment was barely steady to weak in the East, mostly steady elsewhere. Retail demand was slow to fair, at times moderate for food service, with best movement for ads, catering, and fast food. However, interest in the West increased due to July Fourth needs and first of the month activities. Supplies were balanced to ample and discounted to help clear additional product. In the parts structure, trading was light. Breast items were mixed, but better balanced for cuts featured in retail ads. The remaining items were at least adequate and also discounted, but had limited success. In production areas, live supplies were moderate. Weights were desirable to heavy, mostly desirable.

Northeast Broiler Fryer Parts Part I

ATLANTA, GA.
June 26, 2002
Report Supplied By USDA

Trucklot buying activity was light to no better than fair during midweek trading as dealers remained cautious and selective in order to keep product in close balance with the limited demand. Offerings of boneless-skinless breasts were well cleared. Bone-in breasts were at least sufficient. Thighs and boneless-skinless thighs were readily available. The balance of parts were more than adequate. Movement through retail and distributive channels ranged fair to moderate, with best movement centering around scattered boneless-skinless breast features.

The market tone was steady on boneless-skinless breasts, no better than steady on bone-in breasts, barely steady to weak on thighs and thigh meat, and about steady on the balance.

East Fluid Milk And Cream Review

Madison, Wis.
June 26, 2002
Report Supplied by USDA

Spot prices of class II cream, dollars per lb. butterfat: F.O.B. producing plants: Northeast: 1.2982-1.3996. Delivered Equivalent: Atlanta: 1.2982-1.4199 mostly 1.3185-1.3793.

PRICES OF CONDENSED SKIM, dollars per lb. wet solids, F.O.B. producing plants: Northeast: Class II, includes monthly formula prices: .9200-1.0250; Class III - spot prices - .7500-.9600.

SPOT SHIPMENTS OF GRADE A MILK: FLORIDA: This week - In 0, Out 96; last week - In 0, Out 32; last year - In 0, Out 75. SOUTHEAST STATES: This week - In 0, Out 0; last week - In 0, Out 0; last year - In 0, Out 0.

Weather continues to play a major role in milk output in the East. Continued rains in the far north are making first cutting alfalfa difficult to harvest and some fields have been left fallow because they are too wet to plant. Much of the region from the Northeast to Florida is experiencing very hot weather and the milk flow is being adversely affected. However, Florida's milk output is reported to have rebounded as the state is getting some much needed rain and the evenings are not as hot as they have been. This, along with much slower Class I demand, has forced nearly 100 loads of milk out of state for processing. This is a significantly higher number than a week ago and surprised many contacts.

As is normal, the effects of the hot weather are seen in lower fat and protein levels. Class I sales are steady at slow levels in nearly all areas of the East. Surplus milk supplies are heavier in the Southeast; steady to slightly lower in the more northern areas. Contacts are making arrangements for next week when some manufacturing plants will be down for various periods of time.

The condensed skim market is basically steady. Some prices for July Class III sales are expected to be up slightly based on estimates of the July Class III skim milk price.

The fluid cream market started the week on the weak side, but firmed up by midweek. Supplies were long, but did tighten significantly as users try to step up output before they shut down during the holiday weekend. Reports indicate that several cream cheese operations will not take cream most of next week which will impact availability. Also, several ice cream plants have notified supplies that they will be down from the fourth to the seventh. This week, spot prices are virtually unchanged from last week. Multiples were occasionally lower, but mostly in the mid to upper 130's. Demand is reported as mixed. Ice cream output is at normal summer levels and the hot weather is helping consumption of soft serve and frozen novelties. Bottled cream sale are starting to slow as most of the strawberry season is past. Cream cheese output is moderate to heavy this week. Churning activity is lighter.

The OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC — THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

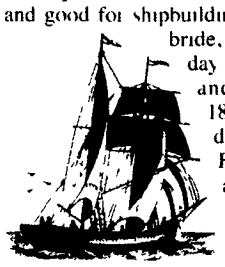
DOG DAYS BEGIN, JULY 3

CHANGEABLE DAYS

Hesiod, an eighth-century B C prophet, marked the first seven days of any month thus the first day, holy, the second and third, luckless, the fourth, holy and good for shipbuilding, travel, or bringing home a bride, the fifth, a terrible, unkindly day to avoid, the sixth, changeable, and the seventh, holy July 2, 1816, was an exemplary luckless day in nautical history—the French frigate Medusa went aground near Africa, and although 147 shipmates clambered aboard a raft, only 15 survived In other nautical news, on July 6, 1699, a changeable day according to Hesiod, the pirate Captain Kidd was captured off of Boston No doubt it changed things for him



As the Dog Days commence, so they end.

TIP OF THE WEEK

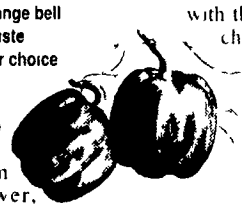
COLORFUL VEGETABLE SALAD

1 head cauliflower
1 head broccoli
1 pound carrots
16 ounces fresh peas
1 bunch celery
yellow, red, or orange bell pepper(s), to taste
vinaigrette of your choice

Cut the vegetables into bite-size pieces Steam the cauliflower, broccoli and carrots until just barely tender Do not overcook! Peas celery and peppers should remain raw Toss all together with the vinaigrette, chill for at least 4 hours Serve with grilled fish or meat

Makes 10 servings



The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

The first Friday in July is always wet.

OPINION

Penn State's Competitive Edge

Penn State University has a lot on its mind.

Well, think for once about having to keep track of high school graduates, according to Dean Robert Steele of the College of Agricultural Sciences.

There are 501 school districts in Pennsylvania. Penn State is competing against 147 four-year institutions in Pennsylvania and 3,700 in the U.S. for students from the high schools, what he refers to as "feeder schools," which have potential Penn State students.

What are the incentives?

Steele, who spoke in York earlier this month at a meeting of the College of Agricultural Sciences Alumni Society and the Penn State Agricultural Council, noted that, yes, tuition makes Penn State one of the most expensive schools in the Big 10. But schools such as the University of Wisconsin can pay for a lot more education than Penn State — simply because of a "tradition." Wisconsin legislators insure their own taxpayers pay a lot for tuition.

Scholarship programs are critical. The College of Agricultural Sciences has the "largest scholarship program of any college at Penn State," he said. The college plans to award $1.5 million in scholarships next fall to help students afford a Penn State education.

Trouble is, the money reaches only 25 percent of the students. So it is with a new spirit of thinking for Penn State to keep to its plan, since 1862, to provide an "affordable education."

The average student, after completing a four-year degree, owes $18,000. But starting salary of a graduate from Penn State is $30,000 per year, according to Steele.

The difference between a mere high school and a college education? "About $1 million," Steele noted, over a lifetime of income.

Steele stressed the importance of modernization yet pointed to universities that are waiving tuition fees to attract the brightest Pennsylvania students. He pointed to Michigan State, which is literally "buying" students from Pennsylvania.

To compete, Penn State must modernize, expand, and market, just like any business, to keep that competitive edge. You can't blame them. We just hope they do it right.

June is coming to an end, and with it the end of my reign as the Wyoming/Lackawanna Counties Dairy Princess. This year has been one full of memorable experiences and events I will never forget.

Teaching elementary school kids about the importance of a balanced diet consisting of dairy products and convincing people to try the different flavors of cheese have been at the top of my list of great days. But another rewarding time came from helping some of the residents in the Tunkhannock Methodist Manor make Christmas ornaments. More than the dairy product advice I gave them, they enjoyed the shear bliss of my undivided attention.

Being a Dairy Princess means more than promoting the industry, it means meeting people and bringing a smile to their faces whenever possible. It means giving people the facts and letting them decide if dairy is the right choice for themselves and their families. It also means a responsibility to the farmers who support our program. So I would like to thank them for the chance they've given me and for the opportunity to do something for an industry that has done so much to create the Princess I became.

As I leave my position, I would like to thank my Alternate Becki Carr, Dairy Maid Denise Hardisky, Dairy Ambassador Billy Anderson, and Dairy Miss Rachel Smarkusky for their help this year. Thank-you for your help and support through many promotions. And, I know that the incoming court Becki, Stacey, Denise, Rachel, Brandy, and Autumn will be more than willing to continue spreading the news of "delightful dairy products."

To Use Presidedress Soil Nitrate Test (PSNT) To Renovate Strawberry Fields

Conventional strawberry fields can be productive for several years if one renovates them properly. Renovation should begin as soon as possible after harvest is finished.

The first step is to apply 2-4-D (Formula 40) for broadleaf control if necessary. Wait four to seven days for the weeds to absorb the herbicide. Then mow off the strawberries as close to the ground as possible without damaging the crowns.

Next narrow the rows to 6 to 12 inches wide with a rototiller or cultivator. Allow one inch of soil to cover the crowns. Fertilize with 40-50 pounds of actual nitrogen per acre and apply phosphorus and potash according to soil test requirements.

One should also apply herbicides for summer weed control as suggested in Penn State's Commercial Berry Production Pest Management Guide. This guide is available from your County Extension Office and has a wealth of information for the commercial berry producer. Sinbar or Devrinol are two preemergent herbicides commonly used for summer weed control.

Irrigate to incorporate the fertilizer and herbicide. Late in August the strawberries will form buds for next years fruit crop. Fertilize again at this time with 20 pounds of actual nitrogen per acre.

To Attend A No-Till Field Day For Horse Farmers

Soil erosion is still a significant problem on many farms in Lancaster County. Two field days have been planned which will focus on using no-till practices successfully when farming with horses.

Penn State Cooperative Extension will sponsor the events on July 9 at the David Stoltzfus Farm, 461 Whitehorse Road, Gap. The program will be repeated on July 10 at the John and A.K Stoltzfus' Farm, 214 Peach Bottom Road, Peach Bottom.

Sjoerd W. Duiker, soil management specialist from the crops and soil science department at Penn State will speak on improving soils with no-till.

Steve Groff, from Holtwood, PA who is nationally known as an innovative no-till farmer will speak on a systems approach to no-till. Gideon Stoltzfus, of Gap will discuss corn-planting equipment for no-till.

Leland Miller, a crop consultant in Lancaster County will discuss plant nutrition in no-till. Jeff Stoltzfus, an adult farmer instructor from New Holland and Lancaster county agronomy agent Bob Anderson, will discuss pesticide safety.

Pest concerns in no-till will be addressed by Mark Goodson, capital region agronomy agent. A crop walk will be a part of both days' events.

Lunch will be provided and pesticide credits will be available for both events. For more information contact the Lancaster County Extension Office at (717) 394-6851.

To Welcome A New Director Of Penn State's School Of Forest Resources

Charles Strauss, professor of forest economics, has been named director of Penn State's School of Forest Resources for a three-year term that began May 1.

Robert Steele, dean of the College of Agricultural Sciences, announced the appointment of Strauss, who served for 10 months as the school's interim director.

The School of Forest Resources currently enrolls about 380 undergraduate and 130 graduate students. As director, Strauss oversees more than 70 faculty and staff, including two endowed positions, the Maurice K. Goddard Chair in Forestry and Environmental Resource Conservation and the Joseph E. Ibberson Chair in Forest Resources Management.

The school's teaching, research, and cooperative extension and outreach programs focus on wood science; forest biology and management; wood products marketing, management and manufacturing; fisheries and wildlife science and management; urban and community forestry; watershed science and management; wetlands ecology; and genetics and systematics.

Strauss has served the university for more than 40 years. His academic interests include recreation economics, energy economics and investment analysis of resource systems. His research on the economic impact of travel and tourism has included an evaluation of heritage tourism in southwestern Pennsylvania and a study of eco-tourism surrounding the elk herd in northcentral Pennsylvania.

Strauss has taught several undergraduate and graduate courses and served on many university and statewide boards and committees. His numerous honors include the Research Honor Award from the Pennsylvania Recreation and Park Society, the Professional Service Award from the Pennsylvania Forestry Association and the School of Forest Resources Outstanding Faculty Award, which is selected by graduate and undergraduate student groups.

Strauss began his professional career as a technical design representative for the California Redwood Association in 1960. In 1961, he came to Penn State as a forest products extension specialist. He joined the resident faculty as an instructor in 1966, attaining the rank of full professor in 1990.

Strauss holds three Penn State degrees: a bachelor's in forest management, a master's in economics and a doctorate in agricultural economics. He also earned a master's degree in forest products marketing from Michigan State University.

REBELLION AND REMEMBRANCE

Background Scripture:
Psalms 78:1-8.
Devotional Reading:
Psalms 135:1-7.

One of the revolutions that Christianity brought into the world was a different concept of history. Before he became a Christian, Augustine saw history in the classic Greek perspective: history constantly repeating itself in a cyclical fashion, without beginning or end. In this view there is nothing really new under the sun. So, much of human life was based upon the recurring cycles of nature. Life was a treadmill.

When Augustine became a Christian, however, he put together two concepts: history and prophecy. Prophets see the possibility of something new happening, a new direction taken. That is the whole basis upon which prophecy is founded: calling people to change their hearts and ways and, in the bargain, history, too.

Augustine saw history not as a cycle, but as a progression that had a beginning and was working toward an end. This progression was part of the plan and purpose of God. Life is not a treadmill but a stairway or incline that leads us upward, not in circles.

No Future Inevitable

The psalmists also believed that we can learn from history and change the future. Sacred history, the story of how God works in the affairs of both individuals and nations, was one of the most important features of Judaism.

Just as the prophets did not see the future as inevitable, but that it could be changed if people changed, so the psalmists attempted to help people learn from the past and thus change the future.

The Psalmist calls the people of Israel to consider their history and what they might learn from it. They are not doomed to repeat the mistakes of the past: "... that they should not be like their fathers, a stubborn and rebellious generation ... whose spirit was not faithful to God" (78:8). This is one of the abiding themes of Hebrew history: the faithlessness of the people. This is what the Psalmist means when he says: "I will utter dark sayings of old...." (v. 2b.). The history of Israel was composed of good news and bad news — the unfaithfulness of their ancestors is the bad news.

What is the purpose of remembering the sins of previous generations? So that we may learn to recognize the sins of today and, recognizing them, choose to break from the cycle of sin into a better future. If we do not remember the wrongs of yesterday, we will likely perpetuate them today and tomorrow. Are we, too, "a stubborn and rebellious generation?" Can we break out of this recurring cycle of human ingratitude?

What God Has Done And Is Doing

There is, however, an even greater theme: the faithfulness of the Lord. This is the good news of their history and this, too, needs to be remembered. They need to recount "the glorious deeds of the Lord and his might, and the wonders which he has wrought" (v. 4).

Despite the rebellions of the people against the Lord, he did not forsake them. The people had broken the covenant with God, but he kept it alive with his grace.

Retelling the mighty works of the Lord was a very important feature of Judaism and still is today, tracing the presence and action of the Lord throughout their turbulent history. The result: a profound sense of God's grace and presence.

Looking back over my life, I realize now that, when I was much, much younger, I tended to take for granted the things my parents did for me and with me. Today, I am humbled to remember their grace toward me.

We can only grow beyond this "what-have-you-done-for-me-lately?" attitude when in remembrance we recognize it and decide our future will be different.

Berks County Grazier Maximizes Soil Returns

BETHEL (Berks Co.) — Eleven years ago changes began taking place in the pastures of Papa Farm.

When Brian Mohn began his pasture-based program it was hard to find information on rotational grazing," he said. "I read Lancaster Farming articles and got ideas that migrated from Lancaster."

Mohn along with his wife Karen, and daughters Beverly, 12, Carolyn 10 and Judy, 8 have managed the farm for 11 years for a Philadelphia businessman.

His investigation into grazing came because of a 'concern for good usage of the ground' he said. 'I wanted to get the most out of this moderately productive ground.'

A lot of it was trial and error initially,' he said. County agents helped in his education by conducting pasture walks and grazier discussions that helped to educate Mohn.

'In the initial days I traveled to Lancaster for pasture information to learn about water quality projects," he said. Besides adding streambank fencing, Mohn has put in his own concrete stream crossings.

Now, "to get a profitable operation I don't see any other way you can be in the cow/calf business without being in the grazing business," he said. Because of smaller-framed animals with improved genetics — and carefully-maintained pastures that the animals do not have to be fed supplemental hay or grain for the most part, the operation's costs have declined.

Pennsylvania Spokesman

A year ago, Mohn went to America's Forage and Grassland Council's conference in Springdale, Arkansas as Pennsylvania's spokesman. Every spokesperson gave a 12-minute presentation on what forages mean to them.

"The main audience is university researchers, USDA pasture management people, scientists, and extension agents," he said. "We were given the opportunity to teach the teachers. They wanted more information to take back to educate others.

"There were people from all over the country competing. There were very diverse speeches from graziers, hay producers, and dairy producers."

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — Richard Hann knows the history and workings of the Pennsylvania Forage & Grassland Council.

For 34 years, Hann has been a vital part in the organization, handling the finances and acting as chief coordinator of events, board meetings, and membership matters. He has served as secretary-treasurer since 1968 in addition to those responsibilities he assumed a new executive director post in 2000.

Hann recently reflected on PFGC's history, along with changes in agriculture and forage management that have occurred through the years.

First formed in 1960 as the Pennsylvania Grassland Council (PGC), the organization became affiliated with American Grassland Council in 1963. The name was changed to Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council in 1978 to more fully recognize its role in the state's forage/livestock industry.

Dr. John Baylor, then a Penn State Extension Forage Specialist was the Council's first president and Charles Wolgemuth general manager of Milton Hershey Farms

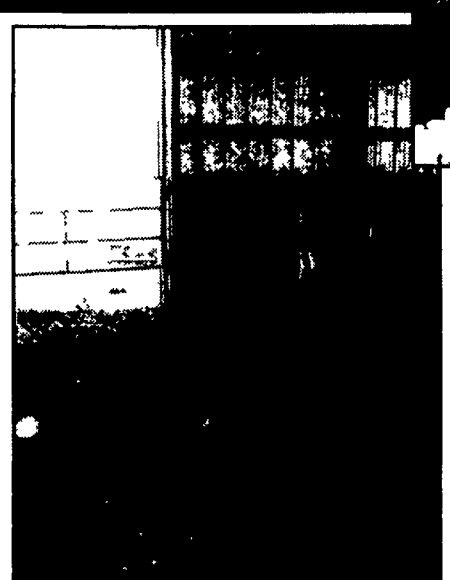
"The biggest benefit is the labor savings."



"My only regret is that I wish I had made the pit under the barn deeper."

"In my previous barn, I scraped two times a day; and I was tired of it, not to mention the danger to the cows if a cable snapped. I thought I would not be able to justify the additional cost until my builder suggested a design change which brought the cost down relatively close to the original design.

The biggest benefit to me is the labor savings. Two people can handle all the chores for our herd. I save money not only on labor but also on repairs.

The cows' hooves are healthier, and they show heat better because they are not afraid of slipping. During the five years with slats, I have not lost a single heifer from slipping. The cows stay much cleaner, even with my misting system for cooling them. The water has a place to escape."

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

Ken Bailey
Penn State
June 24, 2002
Futures Markets Take A Hit

- Class III futures drop.
- Cheese falls below support.
- Cold storage numbers way up.

The dairy futures markets in Chicago took a nosedive this past week in reaction to soft demand and growing inventories of butter and cheese. The Class III futures markets as of Friday, June 21, showed Class III prices bottoming out at $9.89 per CWT in July and peaking at just $11.15 per CWT in September. Recall that just two months ago the September Class III futures price was $13.50 per CWT. Class IV futures last Friday were equally weak, remaining at $10.50-$10.70 per CWT for the rest of the year.

This means that producer milk checks will continue to decline through August (you get the July milk check in August).

Why is the market taking a nosedive? Well, the number of cows being milked nationwide continues to grow each month, production per cow has recovered from a year ago, and demand for dairy products is not what it was last year. That all adds up to a little too much milk and dairy products, growing inventory, and weak prices.

The cheese market at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange declined throughout the week. Blocks fell from $1.14 per pound on Monday, June 17 to $1.10 per pound by Friday, June 21. That is officially below the USDA support price of $1.1314 per pound. Barrel cheese also fell, from $1.1125 per pound on Monday to $1.0725 per pound by Friday. The barrel cash market was also below the USDA support price of $1.1014 per pound.

USDA reported last Friday that cheese demand was unable to offset the amount of cheese being produced; thus, inventory was increasing. The Cold Storage report released last week indicated that cheese inventory as of May 31, 2002 was well ahead of year-ago levels. For example, American cheese inventory was up 6 percent, other cheese (mainly Italian style cheeses) was up 15 percent, and total cheese inventory was up 9 percent.

The situation is less clear for butter. Wholesale Grade AA butter prices in Chicago last week actually rose from $1.01 per pound on Monday to $1.0175 by Friday. According to USDA, "cream supplies have tightened now that milk production is lower, butterfat tests are declining, and demand from other cream based products is improving." That means the market is turning around for butter and butterfat.

That said, the Cold Storage report indicated that butter inventory as of May 31 was up 67 percent from a year ago. So why isn't butter trading at the support level of $0.8548? One answer may be that the cash market this week is reflecting demand down the road. In other words, the market is looking ahead to the fall months. We will increasingly have less butterfat and cream available for sale from now through the fall.

Dairy producers interested in hedging their milk for the fall months should hold off on their plans for now. Yes, it is possible that fall milk prices could get weaker (Class III below $11 per CWT). The Class III price in September 2000 was just $10.76 per CWT. The reality is, there is little to gain in locking in fall milk supplies now. Market conditions may improve later this summer if the milk supply begins to slow down (cow numbers level off) and the U.S. economy improves.

In the meantime, convince your neighbors and friends to buy pizza. There is too much mozzarella cheese in inventory!

Average Farm Feed Costs for Handy Reference

To help farmers across the state to have handy reference of commodity input costs in their feeding operations for DHIA record sheets or to develop livestock feed cost data, here's last week's average costs of various ingredients as compiled from regional reports across the state of Pennsylvania.

Remember, these are averages, so you will need to adjust your figures up or down according to your location and the quality of your crop.

National Feeder Cattle Weekly Review

St. Joseph, Mo.
June 21, 2002
Report Supplied By USDA

NATIONAL FEEDER & STOCKER REVIEW - week ending June 21. TOTAL RECEIPTS: 274,800, last week 305,200. Auctions: 195,600, last week 213,200. Direct: 70,900, last week 53,000. Video/ Internet: 8,300, last week 39,000. This week's reported auction volume included 47% over 600 lbs and 44% heifers.

Compared to last week, feeder and stocker cattle prices were steady to 2.00 higher across most all of the major trading areas. Trends were very similar for both heavyweight yearling feeders and lightweight stocker cattle and calves. The improved demand for heavier cattle was spurred by a strong CME feeder cattle futures market early in the week. Lightweight cattle prices found support as farmers in many areas finally got caught up on fieldwork, whether it was planting corn and beans in the Midwest or harvesting wheat on the Plains.

As temperatures heat up, livestock marketing usually slows down and leaves commission men, order buyers, and cattle truckers with the summertime blues. This is already the case in many areas, but certain regions are seeing active movement. Producers in the fescue country of lower Missouri are busy moving cattle off grass before the hot and humid "summer slump" sets in, resulting in almost 13,000 head marketed through the Joplin Regional Stockyards this week.

Drought conditions continue to flood Colorado salebarns with cow-calf pairs in the fire-ridden Rocky Mountains. Dry conditions are also forcing cattle off dry pastures in the Black Hills of South Dakota. Livestock auctions in places like Ft.

Pierre, SD, are seeing receipts of several thousand head, when they would normally be closed for the summer. Fortunately the market has been strong for both feeders and replacements, which kept from adding insult to those injured by the record drought.

It seems like the cattle industry can't keep all of its members happy at the same time. Cow-calf producers have enjoyed high calf prices for the last several years, but many of them are currently experiencing desperate times. Cattle feeders have been bogged down in red ink for what seems like forever and are now starting to see a promising situation this fall. For the backgrounder the drill is always the same.

Holstein Association Improves Marketing, Services

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Since hiring a chief executive officer and adopting a business plan, the National Holstein Association has already shown a profit on bottom-line operations compared to substantial months of losses just a short time ago.

"I am pleased to report that the early results show that the plan is working," said John M. Meyer, chief executive officer of the association, Brattleboro, Vt.

Meyer spoke Wednesday morning during the annual meeting at the National Holstein Convention at the Trump Taj Mahal in Atlantic City.

"We believe in the Holstein cow, and know that she is the cornerstone of the dairy industry," said Meyer.

Through May, the association shows a profit on operations of $447,000, compared to a loss in 2001 in the first five months of $780,000. There has been a bottom-line improvement of about $1.23 million.

This marked the 13th year the association has shown a loss in its operation, Meyer noted.

The 2002 business plan has incorporated 15 separate objectives, which includes increasing the number of registrations and registration revenue by 3 percent to 328,000; increase the annual total of regular transfers from 49,000 forecasted for 2001 to 59,000 in 2002, thus increasing revenue; increasing revenue from Basic ID (34 new herds signed up year to date); packaging products and pricing incentives for customers; implementation of a national ID program for all bovines in place by the end of 2003; expanding ID programs and services in foreign countries; improving working relationship with U.S. AI companies; outsourcing export services associated with marketing Holstein cattle in Mexico; combining Holstein's database and Internet capabilities plus direct marketing to sell live cattle in Mexico; expansion of the Holstein Foundation; and other measures.

"Although the financial condition of the Holstein Association has been dismal in recent years, we cannot dwell on the past," Meyer said. "Rather, we must look to the future of this association and the Holstein cow we all believe in."

The Holstein board of directors has been busy, too, incorporating plans to improve services.

"The board wanted to hear the thoughts and concerns of our grass roots, so we hosted nine regional meetings across the U.S.," said Joann Hartman, Holstein Association USA president, Waterloo, Ill., Wednesday morning at the annual meeting.

"We listened to the strong feelings at these meetings of specific topics our members related to us," she said. The topics included ethics, TPI, finances, and to consider the discontinuation of programs not being used or those in the red.

Hartman appointed a TPI committee to meet and work diligently, she said, with the Genetic Advancement Committee to consider "if we can improve the TPI formula for members to feel more comfortable," she said. "That is what we are looking for, to improve the breed as well as equality for all size herds."

Some concerns: production records, percentage RHA animals, and others. The association members need to "let folks know how we feel about the credibility of our industry, honesty and integrity in the show ring, milk records, and a full disclosure of the identification of percentage RHA animals by showing their percentages on their pedigrees in catalogs as well as advertising or any time information is presented. As producers and Registered Holstein breeders, if you tell them loud and strong enough, they will listen."

The board and delegates need to work with young adults, noted Hartman, to get them involved in the governance process. "They are our future, and provide a fresh perspective on the challenges facing the dairy industry."

Inspiration, Dedication, Education Part Of Summer Institute

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

SHIPPENSBURG (Cumberland Co.) — More than 50 scholars, joined by more than 30 adults and scholar staff completed this year's Mid Atlantic Alliance of Cooperative (MAAC) and Penn State's Summer Institute Wednesday.

Since the first institute conducted in 1961, the conference, which began Sunday and ran through Wednesday, taught the students business, communication, and leadership skills in the framework of learning about and working as a cooperative.

Contests, activities, and speakers throughout the week taught not only the basics of a cooperative but also prepared students for the working world. Students interviewed for jobs, gave speeches, published a newspaper, and prepared a financial statement during the institute.

The institute culminated in a luncheon to recognize the winners of the week's competition and award scholarships to the students who will be traveling to the national institute this July in Chicago.

A chorus and variety show provided entertainment and a chance for the scholars to showcase their talents. A picnic, dances, and a tour of a nearby cooperative were also part of the week.

On Tuesday Jessica Erickson, last year's National Institute on Cooperative Education (NICE) ambassador, and David Eaves, NICE ambassador alternate, shared their experiences with their peers.

One of the team building exercises included the "MAAC 500," a new event where the students designed, built, marketed, and successfully raced a vehicle made from plastic pipe, duct tape, wheels, and miscellaneous items. Points were awarded for the promotion campaign, design and performance of the vehicle, and cleanup.

A few of the scholars shared short summaries of the institute's events.

For example, the students participated in a group exercise where they were given various business scenarios and were asked to develop plans for gaining revenue and providing member benefits. After the scholars presented their proposals the staff questioned the students about the details of the proposals.

"We learned that to please everyone is nearly impossible, but if everyone works together, the issues will be settled," said Jeff Chapin.

Four members of the 1982 scholar staff, Glen Butters, Jay Clark, Andy Rill, and Lolly Lesher, returned to share thoughts of what they remember from their experiences with the institute. All four had traveled to Fort Collins, Colorado, to participate in the national convention.

"You will remember the fun you had, and that you didn't get much sleep, but mostly you will remember the people," said Lesher.

Rill referred to the opportunity as "a stepping stone, hand up, and pat on the back," and thanked the leaders "that touched our lives back then," he said.

The MINICO award was presented to MINICO 2, "The Dairy Ducks." The group included Amanda Clowney, Corey Free, Kyle Grim, Emily Grove, Stephen Henning, Justin Hershberger, Rebecca Highley, Emily Hotchkiss, Amy Kaucher, Kevin Kreider, Jason Manross, Laura Sheffer, and Phil Weiler.

The Theme Poster Award went to Laura Grove, the Variety Show award went to Anthony Seymore and also the Maryland and Western Region scholars; the Co-op Weakest Link winner was Regina Lehman; and the "MAAC 500" champion team was "Party Hardy."

Other awards included the Hal Doran Adult Resource Leader Award, won by Cliff Day; the Viewpoint Award, won by Anthony Seymore; the Walter Loy Examination Achievement Award, won by Matthew Fearnley and Regina Lehman; and the Jay W. Irwin Institute Leadership Awards won by Anthony Seymore and Mary Strasbaugh.

NCFC Testifies Tax Fairness For Farmer Cooperatives

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The National Council of Farmer Cooperatives (NCFC) in testimony to the Senate Committee on Finance's Hearing on Small Business and Rural Development expressed its strong support of S.312, the Tax Empowerment and Relief for Farmers and Fishermen (TERFF) Act, introduced by Senators Charles Grassley (R-IA) and Max Baucus (D-Mont.).

"Farmer cooperatives, their farmer owners, employees, and their families all have a huge interest in rural America, since that is where they call home," testified David Graves, president and CEO of NCFC.

There are over 3,000 farmer cooperatives in the U.S., Graves noted, whose member owners include a majority of America's nearly 2 million individual farmers. Being farmer owned and controlled, he emphasized, their earnings are returned to their farmer members on a patronage basis — helping farmers improve their overall income and contributing significantly to the economic and tax base of rural communities.

"In addition," Graves pointed out, "farmer cooperatives represent a significant source of employment for many rural communities all across the country — providing jobs for approximately 300,000 full- and part-time employees with a combined payroll of more than $8 billion."

A major challenge facing farmer cooperatives is access to capital, said Graves. Being farmer owned and controlled, they can not go to Wall Street as easily as other types of businesses. Current tax policy and regulations also limit their ability to raise equity capital.

To help address this issue, S. 312 includes a provision that would modify the Dividend Allocation Rule, which currently, in the case of farmer cooperatives, imposes the equivalent of a "triple tax" on cooperative earnings when dividends are paid on capital stock, reducing the patronage earnings paid to farmer-members. The rule discourages farmer cooperatives from raising equity capital through the use of such financial tools, and puts them at a competitive disadvantage.

"Clearly," Graves urged, "this unfair and discriminatory tax burden should be eliminated."

S.312 also contains several other provisions that would benefit farmer cooperatives by:

- Clarifying current tax law to allow farmers to cooperatively market value-added products through animal processing (the conversion of feed by chickens into products such as eggs, for example) on the same basis as products derived from mechanical processing (wheat into flour);
- Allowing the existing 10 cent credit for small ethanol producers to be passed through by a farmer cooperative directly to and for the benefit of its farmer owners; and
- Extending declaratory judgment procedures to ensure that farmer cooperatives have the same rights to judicial review on tax-related issues as any other similar type entity.

"Maintaining and strengthening the ability of farmers to join together in cooperative self-help efforts is vital to the economic well being of farmers and the rural communities where they live, Graves concluded. "For this reason, NCFC strongly supports S. 312, and commends Senators Grassley and Baucus for introducing this important legislation."

Swift Responses To Ruling On Beef Checkoff

LMA Gratified

Livestock Marketing Association President Billy Perrin said, "We are gratified the Court chose to uphold the Constitutional rights of beef and dairy producers paying the mandatory beef checkoff. The decision affirms a producer's right to free speech, and the right to promote his own product."

Perrin said key elements of the Court's ruling include:

Beef producers cannot be compelled to finance advertising programs with which they disagree. The Court said the Constitution requires that beef advertising be paid for "only from assessments paid by producers who do not object to advancing the generic sale of beef and who are not coerced into doing so against their wills."

Several individual plaintiffs in LMA's lawsuit objected to checkoff-financed advertising, claiming the ads made no distinction between U.S. and foreign beef.

Claims made by the Cattlemen's Beef Board and the government, that checkoff programs constitute government speech, are contradicted by several years of so-called "producer communications."

Producer Communications

The Court found that "All of these so-called 'producer communications,' which were prepared with checkoff funds, stress to the producers that the Beef Board is a 'producer-controlled, independent Board.' They stress to the producers that the beef checkoff is an 'industry-run program,' that 'cattlemen run the program.'

"Nowhere in any of the 'producer communications,'" the Court found, "does it even hint that the Board is accountable to the (U.S. Department of Agriculture) or that the speech being paid for by the producers is that of the federal government."

In a further rejection of the defendants' "government speech" argument, the Court said, "Common sense tells us that the government is not 'speaking' in encouraging consumers to eat beef. After all, is the 'government message' therefore that consumers should eat no other product or at least reduce the consumption of other products such as pork, chicken, fish or soy meal? The answer is obvious."

The Court's ruling, Perrin said, "confirms that producers will be able to use their money to promote the beef they produce, in the way they want, in association with people whose beliefs they share. It's now up to the industry to come together to discuss a voluntary program, which we can all support."

LMA began a petition drive in 1998, to obtain a producer referendum on the checkoff. LMA later filed a lawsuit in South Dakota federal district court challenging the U.S. Department of Agriculture's process to validate those petitions.

LMA chose to make a constitutional challenge to the checkoff following the Supreme Court's decision last year ruling that the mushroom checkoff was unconstitutional.

CBB Responds

In the CBB's press release which called the decision "a blow to the U.S. beef industry," Monte Reese, chief operating officer, said, "I have asked the attorneys at the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) and the U.S. Department of Justice (DOJ) who represent us to request a stay of the judge's injunction and begin the appeal process."

"Obviously, we are disappointed with the decision," said Beef Board Chairman Dee Lacey, a cow-calf producer from Paso Robles, Calif. "But this represents just one step in a lengthy process, and we're in it for the long haul."

Lacey pointed out that the USDA and Department of Justice have stood strong behind the checkoff program throughout this legal challenge.

"It's unfortunate that the plaintiffs in this case have chosen to distract attention and funding from the real issues at hand in our industry today to wade through this legal morass," Lacey said.

NCBA Calls Ruling Temporary Setback

Calling the judge's decision, "a strike against the American beef industry," the NCBA issued a positive response on behalf of its members.

"We believe this ruling is only a temporary setback for American beef producers," said Wythe Willey, president of the National Cattlemen's Beef Association and a beef producer from Cedar Rapids, Iowa. Willey said NCBA is confident the case will be overturned on appeal and the judge's ruling stayed so that the checkoff can continue while the case advances to the next court level.

"We will continue the business of promoting beef while this process takes place, with minimal distraction," Willey said. "We believe the checkoff, the 'Beef. It's What's For Dinner.' promotions and other similar programs designed to build demand have returned significant dividends to producers over the years. We will follow the law, of course, but believe the judge has misinterpreted it.

"Fortunately, the beef industry has an extremely strong case, and we believe we will prevail in higher court. The checkoff has been and will continue to be an effective way for producers to invest in their future."

Nebraskan Comments

"This ruling reverses the will of Congress," said J.D. Alexander, immediate-past president of Nebraska Cattlemen and a feedlot operator from Pilger, Neb. "It's an attempt to stop an entire industry in its tracks and takes away the empowerment of nearly a million beef producers."

"By taking the beef checkoff to court, LMA and WORC have demonstrated a disregard for the future of U.S. agriculture, said Alexander. "It's ironic that they are taking this action at the same time Canada is working to get its own checkoff program, which opens the door to increased competition in export markets.

Ralph "Shorty" Jones, a beef producer from Midland, S.D., and an intervener in the lawsuit, said the beef industry is "deeply disappointed" by the judge's decision. "However, the industry remains confident in the constitutionality of the checkoff."

"The U.S. Department of Agriculture and Department of Justice have promised to vigorously defend the beef checkoff," said Willey. "We expect the Department of Justice to immediately initiate appeal procedures. The checkoff and its programs will continue while a request for stay is considered."

USDA Sec. Veneman Disappointed by Ruling

USDA Secretary Ann M Veneman, who met with 200 area farmers and agribusinessmen in Lancaster County Friday afternoon, issued the following statement:

"I am disappointed by the ruling of the U.S. District Court in South Dakota that the Beef Promotion and Research Act is unconstitutional. The U.S. Department of Agriculture regards such programs, when properly administered, as effective tools for market enhancement.

"The beef promotion program in particular has helped beef demand to increase and has contributed to increased U.S. beef exports. These results have led to support for the program by a majority of beef producers.

"We are consulting with the Department of Justice to determine next steps."

Pennsylvanians Can Help Plan State's Environmental Future

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvanians are invited to attend a series of public meetings to help develop watershed Action Plans under DEP's Environmental Futures Planning Process (EFP2).

"Using feedback from 75 public meetings attended by more than 1,500 people over the past 15 months, DEP has established environmental-improvement goals and has set yardsticks for how to measure progress toward achieving those goals in 34 watersheds covering the entire state," DEP secretary David Hess said.

"The next step is finalizing Action Plans for each watershed that will outline the specific steps we need to take to achieve these local environmental goals."

In cooperation with various watershed partners, each of the six DEP regions will conduct a series of meetings to review the action plans. The public is encouraged to participate in these meetings.

"By helping us finalize the Action Plans, the public will help determine where DEP and other partners spend our time and money to improve the environment," Secretary Hess said.

"The public's input will help us deal with water-quality issues, as well as waste reduction and recycling, air-pollution control, pollution prevention, energy-use reduction, mine reclamation, flood protection, environmental education, and open-space preservation."

DEP initiated the innovative Environmental Futures Planning Process (EFP2) in 2001 based on recommendations from the Governor's 21st Century Environment Commission.

Marketing Theme Of Ohio Profitability Tour

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Ohio farm families looking for economic alternatives to sustain their farming operations can attend any one of 20 tours highlighted in the 2002 Ohio Farm Profitability Tour Series.

The Ohio State University Extension event, which began June 20 and will run through Oct. 26, is designed to help farm families improve their agricultural operations by visiting other farms and farmer's markets of families who have been successful in their endeavors. The tours are free and open to the public and no registration is required.

The theme of this year's tour series is marketing and the tour will cover topics such as marketing products from non-traditional agricultural enterprises, using alternative marketing systems to market traditional farm commodities, developing a direct marketing system for farm products and developing value-added products.

"Participants will be able to see how these farm families utilize marketing systems to sell their products to the community. It's a way of keeping that money within the community as opposed to selling to wholesale or retail markets," said Mike Hogan, an Ohio State Extension agent. "In 1910, for every dollar spent by the consumer, 44 cents was given back to the farmer. In 1990, that number dropped to nine cents. We are trying to help people boost that number back up."

Hogan said that family farm operations can not only be successful in selling to their neighbors, but can also be profitable when targeting urban residents. For example, the Findlay Farmer's Market, located in downtown Cincinnati, is Ohio's oldest and most successful public farmer's market with continuous operation since 1852.

"People bemoan urban sprawl onto agricultural land, but it's something that will likely continue," said Hogan. "Ohio has 10 to 11 million residents. The challenge is how do we make customers out of these people?"

The tour series is sponsored by Ohio State Extension, Ohio Ecological Food and Farm Association, Innovative Farmers of Ohio, and Direct Agricultural Marketing Association, Organic Crop Improvement Association, Natural Resources Conservation Service and North Central Region Sustainable Agriculture Research and Education.

The following is a list of tours scheduled for July through October. For more information or directions to each tour site, contact your local county Extension office, Innovative Farmers of Ohio at (740) 368-8552 or Ohio Ecological Food and Farm Association at (614) 421-2022.

USDA To Begin Collection Of Lamb Checkoff Assessments July 1

DENVER, Colo. — USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service recently announced it will begin collection of lamb checkoff assessments beginning July 1.

Producers, feeders and packers will all contribute to this self-help program. Domestic lamb producers, feeders, seedstock producers and exporters will pay one-half cent ($.005) per pound of live lambs sold. In addition, first handlers, primarily packers, will be assessed 30-cents-per-head of lambs purchased by the first handler for slaughter. Lamb importers will not be assessed.

The program is expected to raise approximately $3 million plus each year to fund promotion, research and information programs. Specific programs will be determined by the program's board of directors, who will be appointed by the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture.

The 13-member board will include: six producer representatives, three feeder representatives; three packers; and one seed stock producer.

"This American lamb program is sorely needed in our industry, and while this board should have been in place already and tackling the problems of the lamb market, it needs to move forward as rapidly as possible," said American Sheep Industry Association President Frank Moore. "Few producers have been at all pleased with live slaughter lamb prices of the past year, and this American Lamb program provides a critical tool for our industry to address a better lamb price."

The collection process will involve first handlers and exporters collecting the assessments from producers, feeders and seedstock producers and remitting the applicable form and assessment due to the Secretary at the following address: Lamb Promotion, Research and Information Program, c/o the Secretary at USDA, 23029 Network Place, Chicago, IL 60673-1230.

The order calls for a delayed referendum to be conducted no later than three years after assessments begin. During this time period, refunds may be requested.

Rules and regulations for the assessment regarding the Lamb Promotion, Research and Information Program were published in a Federal Register Notice, Friday, June 7. The interim final rule includes a request for comments, which are due by Aug. 30.

Copies of the interim final rule and additional information are available from Marlene M. Betts, Acting Chief, Marketing Programs Branch, AMS Livestock and Seed Program, USDA Stop 0251, 1400 Independence Ave. SW, Washington, DC 20250-0251; telephone number (202) 720-1115.

Information and forms also are available on the Internet at www.ams.usda.gov/lsg/mpb/rp-lamb.htm.

Maple Syrup Production Down 20 Percent In Pennsylvania

HARRISBURG, (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania's 2002 maple syrup production is estimated at 55,000 gallons, down 20 percent from last year's production of 69,000 gallons, according to the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service. The value of the syrup produced in 2001 is estimated at $1.75 million, up from the $1.34 million in the year 2000.

The number of taps in Pennsylvania totaled 337,000 during 2002 compared with 360,000 taps the year before. Pennsylvania's yield for the year 2002 averaged 0.163 gallons per tap, down from the 0.192 gallons per tap last year.

Nationally, maple syrup production in 2002 totaled 1.36 million gallons. Production was valued at $30.1 million. The number of taps is estimated at 6.58 million, up 1 percent from 2001. The yield per tap is estimated to be 0.206 gallons, up from 0.162 gallons in 2001.

The 2002 tapping season lasted an average of 52 days, compared to 29 days in 2001. Syrup color was mostly medium to light. The sap's sugar content was lower than last year's with approximately 45 gallons of sap required to produce a gallon of syrup, in contrast with 41 gallons in 2001.

IMPROVING WATER AVAILABILITY IN TIESTALL BARNS

Dan F. McFarland
Extension Agent — Agricultural Engineer, York

Dairy producers realize the importance of drinking water to good production and animal health. Dairy cows will drink 25 to 40 gallons of water a day, depending on their production level and moisture content of the ration. Intake will increase during hot weather.

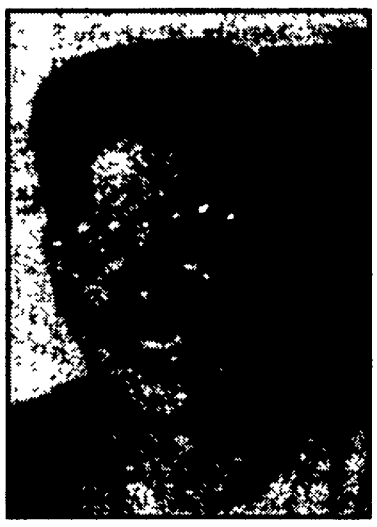
Cows prefer to drink soon after eating and after being milked. Therefore, an adequate supply of water should be available after these events. The preferred drinking posture is to insert their muzzle into the water 1 to 2 inches, leaving their nostrils exposed. Cows can drink 3 to 5 gallons per minute, so adequate supply is necessary to prevent them from "slurping" or drawing in air.

In an effort to reduce water waste and keep the device clean, some watering units used in stall barns have made it difficult for the occupants to drink water. The stall structure (the tie rail, divider, tie chain, and cow trainer) should not restrict access to the watering unit. Often cows must insert their muzzle into the waterer at an awkward angle to activate the valve and drink, limiting intake. Many producers notice improved intake and reduced splashing after water bowls are moved and/or the stall structure modified to allow better access.

Studies indicate that water intake and milk production can increase by providing a water unit for each stall. This reduces the dominant/submissive behavior that can occur between neighboring cows. Access is also improved since the bowl is mounted toward the stall. One local producer noticed a milk production increase of 5 pounds/cow/day in the section of the barn where he installed individual water bowls for each stall. Was it the due to reduced dominance, better access, or improved water bowl design? Probably a combination, but it has convinced this dairyman to complete installation in the rest of the barn.

Assuming the supply (well) to the barn is adequate, the supply and branch lines in the barn must be sized and installed to deliver the water on demand, as needed. Bringing the supply line into the middle of the stall area and tying into the middle of each row of stalls, plus "looping" the branch lines at the ends can help.

Another feature that can limit water intake is the valves. Pressure-reducing valves on the system may be required so the cows can operate the watering unit valves more easily. Of course, bent, broken, or missing paddles should be replaced. Automatic valves are also used to supply water to each unit, but producers have discovered they need regular maintenance to prevent malfunction and overflowing.



Dan F. McFarland

Both large and small bowls are available and used in stall barns. Large bowls (that hold up to 3 gallons) may provide better access and have water readily available, but can be difficult to clean and keep clean. Smaller bowls are easier to clean, but require a dependable supply to keep up with demand.

Some stall barn water systems use reservoir tanks (400 to 600 gallons) "ahead" of the watering units to supply plenty of water as needed. Another system uses a 6-inch to 8-inch PVC loop as a reservoir, securely mounted above the stalls.

Of course, keeping the water source clean at each stall is essential. Feedstuffs, bedding material, and other contaminants collect in the water unit deteriorate and reduce water quality. This material should be removed frequently and each bowl scrubbed weekly, or as required, so that good quality water is offered.

Troughs have been installed at tie rail height to improve water availability in stall barns with some success. However, since the water source is shared by several cows, it can become dirty quickly and must be cleaned regularly.

Take a "cow's eye view" of the watering units in your barn and see how cow access, water quality, and quantity can be improved. You will like the results.

If you would like more information on drinking water systems in stall barns, contact Dan McFarland at (717) 840-7408.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — You may never really have to part with that favorite cow.

Technology today can keep her — all of her genetic traits anyway — around for a long time, theoretically forever.

Her future selves may have slightly different markings or differ in traits such as size a little, depending on influences other than genes. But their genetic makeup, and thus their innate ability to produce a lot of milk and calve easily, for example, will be identical to that of the original cow.

Cloning will likely have a strong influence on the future of the dairy industry, according to a marketing specialist with Cyagra, the Massachusetts company that has produced more than 50 cloned calves to date.

Since the 1998 birth of "George" and "Charlie," the first calves cloned from active cells, Cyagra has been at work improving cloning technology, with a goal of eventually producing cloned calves for a cost under $5,000 to customers, said Ron Gillespie, Cyagra vice president of marketing. Dairy and beef breeders cloning a favorite animal today need to ante up $19,000.

Gillespie outline this technology at a National Holstein Convention session Wednesday in Atlantic City, N.J.

"I personally believe (cloning) is going to have a huge impact on the dairy industry," he said.

According to Gillespie the chief challenges to cloning come from the public's perception of the process.

"Part of our problem with this technology is it's so new, so revolutionary, a lot of people don't understand it very well," he said. One of the most misunderstood aspects is the word "clone" itself, Gillespie said.

He defined a clone as an identical twin that has been made with the aid of humans. This process is called "nuclear transfer" by scientists to refer to what actually happens: the genetic (nuclear) material of a desirable animal is swapped with the genetic material of another animal inside a single egg cell. The egg cell is then implanted into the uterus of a healthy cow and goes through a full gestation period.

The process begins with tissue taken from the donor animal's ear - a sample about one-tenth the size of a quarter dollar. This small patch of tissue contains the entire genetic code of the donor animal. After a period of incubation, the nuclei from these cells are literally injected one by one into salvaged egg cells from another cow's uterus. The genetics of the cow contributing the egg cells are of no importance in this process — the nuclei have been removed before the donor nuclei are inserted.

Robotically controlled microscopes that cost about $150,000 each, Gillespie said, perform this nucleus transfer work.

If successful, the whole process from ear tissue sample to newborn clone calf takes about 10 months, Gillespie said.

A common problem with newborn clone calves is they tend to have enlarged navels that are subject to infection. Also, cows giving birth to clones generally need to undergo a Caesarian section to deliver the calf. These problems are likely related to the fact that the calf is genetically foreign to the recipient cow, Gillespie said.

Cyagra is working on those problems as well as on improving the efficiency of the process. That rate of successfully cloned calves has jumped from 2.5 percent in 2001 to 10 percent so far this year, and is expected to hit 20 percent in 2003, Gillespie said.

The cloning industry also faces regulatory hurdles, including food and animal safety concerns. USDA and FDA hearings scheduled to take place in Texas in September will address these issues.

If widely accepted, cloning will enable dairy producers to make use of an unlimited supply of top genetics, pushing far beyond embryo transfer (ET) technology, according to Gillespie.

"ET helps you maximize returns," said Gillespie. "Now there (will be) no holding back."

Producers will be able to develop herds with traits such as uniformly high producing cows, cows resistant to mastitis, or cows better suited to a particular climate or to technology such as robotic milking, Gillespie said.

Through cloning, dairy farmers may also be able to market products other than milk from the genetically selected and cloned cows. These would include fibers, nutraceuticals, and human proteins found in the milk of the selected animals, according to Gillespie.

Other cloning outcomes could be the ability to produce bulls that make only male or female semen.

A counterpart to cloning is the ability to preserve genomes of selected animals. Also on the way is the ability to identify desirable or undesirable traits from studying the genome, according to Gillespie.

"At some point, you'll be able to look at the genome of your dairy animals and determine whether or not it's desirable," he said.

The "bottom line" of livestock cloning is to enhance food quality and ensure uniformity of product, Garrison said. In his view, that will mean greater profits for dairy producers.

So far, about 60 percent of the cattle successfully cloned by Cyagra have been dairy animals, with beef making up the other 40 percent. The company has also preserved the genomes of, and in many cases cloned, a wide variety of other animals, including pigs, dogs, cats, mice, horses, sheep, and a rare kind of ox.

The Cyagra method involves the cloning of active cells, unlike the way Dolly, the first successfully cloned sheep, was made. Dolly was developed out of resting or "quiescent" cells, Gillespie said.

Dedication, Open House Conducted At New MAEF Headquarters

WEST FRIENDSHIP, Md. — After 13 years of operating the Maryland Agricultural Education Foundation (MAEF) out of temporary offices, the foundation dedicated their new office center at Swan Harbor Farm on June 4 with more than 200 industry and political friends in attendance.

President Ewing McDowell, Rising Sun, chaired the ceremony that included welcoming remarks by Harford County Executive Jim Harkins, Maryland's Secretary of Agriculture Hagner Mister, founding board member Martha Clark and Ann Ferro, MVA Administration, along with several other important guests. Donations from the Philip Morris Company and from Forum for Rural Maryland were presented to the foundation.

The building has been named after Senator Bill Amoss who was a great friend of Maryland's agricultural industry. Led by his brother George, the Amoss family held a stirring tribute to Senator Amoss and presented a photo of the late Senator to the foundation for display in the Senator William H. Amoss Agricultural Center.

A delegation of state delegates and senators, led by Delegate Mary Dulaney James, presented a Maryland Citation to the Foundation recognizing them for their outstanding efforts in educating Maryland's school children about the importance of agriculture in their daily lives.

Marty Stephens was introduced as the new executive director of MAEF and is replacing Steve Connelly who led the organization for six years. A Pennsylvania native, Stephens worked for the Ohio Cooperative Extension Service as a 4-H agent, was executive secretary of the Maryland Agricultural Fair Board and, most recently, served as director of events for the Home Builders Association of Maryland.

Ann Ferro, MVA administrator, announced that over 40,000 Maryland "Ag Tags" have been sold in the first 10 months of sale to Maryland drivers. Introduced in July 2001, a portion of the fee from each sale is being donated to the foundation for support of their educational efforts.

Founded in 1989, MAEF is a non-profit organization that promotes and enhances the understanding and appreciation of agriculture in the daily lives of Marylanders. Currents Foundation programs include Ag In The Classroom, mobile educational labs, Excellence in Teaching about Agriculture Awards, Mini-Grants for agricultural projects and support of the Maryland FFA organization. Support for the foundation comes from public and private grants, donations and the sale of Maryland's "Ag Tag." For information about the Maryland Agricultural Education Foundation, contact Marty Stephens, executive director at (410) 489-9030 (or 410-939-9030 after July 1).

Gov. Schweiker Kicks Off 2002 'Simply Delicious' Produce Season

SUSQUEHANNA TOWNSHIP (Dauphin County) — Calling Pennsylvania agriculture and farm products second to none, Gov. Mark Schweiker kicked off the 2002 produce season by launching an expanded marketing campaign to promote the "Pennsylvania Produce — Simply Delicious" initiative across the commonwealth.

Joined by Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes, local growers, farmers' market and grocery store operators and others, Gov. Schweiker unveiled a 30-second television ad as the centerpiece of a more than $1 million promotional campaign encouraging consumers to purchase Pennsylvania's "Simply Delicious" produce.

"The world is coming to know Pennsylvania as a leader in agribusiness," Schweiker said. "But, while we continue to focus on new markets around the world, we should never lose sight of the fact that growing a worldwide status begins with a homegrown touch.

"Today I am proud to stand along side Secretary Hayes and those who grow and sell Pennsylvania farm products to remind Pennsylvanians that some of the best-tasting produce is right at their front doors. Our homegrown fruits and vegetables are second to none. Pennsylvania produce is 'Simply Delicious,' and when we buy homegrown products, we are supporting our hard-working farm families while we feed our own families."

During a visit to Fox's Markets in suburban Harrisburg, a participating store in the program, Schweiker unveiled the new 30-second television ad promoting Pennsylvania produce as "simply delicious" through the eyes and words of an enthusiastic little boy enjoying local produce. The commercial began airing in central Pennsylvania, and will reach five media markets across the commonwealth by August. The ad will air more than 2,000 times this growing season.

"Make no mistake — the 'Simply Delicious' campaign isn't just a feel-good TV commercial. It is an essential new tool that will help our family farmers compete for business," Schweiker said. "Both Pennsylvania growers and sellers have expressed to me the need to stay competitive with other states in the fruit and vegetable market. 'Simply Delicious' helps us do just that by promoting Pennsylvania products in Pennsylvania."

To provide another reminder to consumers, Schweiker said that 400 "Simply Delicious" billboards will, once again, be on display across Pennsylvania, providing colorful messages about Pennsylvania produce. Largely in part to the billboards and new television commercial, this year Pennsylvania will invest more than $1 million to promote the "Simply Delicious" program.

"We can all be Pennsylvania proud of the quality and bounty of the 'Simply Delicious' fruits and vegetables provided by the labor and dedication of Pennsylvania's growers," Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes said. "There is something for everyone to enjoy, from fresh sweet corn and tomatoes to sun-ripened strawberries and juicy peaches. It is easy to see why our produce is 'Simply Delicious.'"

Launched in 1998, the "Simply Delicious" promotion program continues to tell the good story about Pennsylvania produce, helping Pennsylvanians to find locally grown, farm-fresh products. More than 1,300 retail outlets and 650 growers are committed to this innovative marketing program, partnering to meet consumer demand and build on Pennsylvania No. 1 industry — agriculture.

Anchored by more than $4 billion in annual cash-value commodity receipts, agriculture generates $44 billion in related economic activity each year and employs more than 800,000 people.

Pennsylvania ranks in the top 10 states in the production of many fruits and vegetables, including apples, cantaloupes, tomatoes, grapes, mushrooms, pears, peaches, pumpkins, snap bean processing, strawberries, sweet cherries, sweet corn and sweet corn processing, and tart cherries.

To help grocery stores and farmers' markets spread the "Simply Delicious" message, promotional items such as price cards, banners, posters, and graphics are available. For more information on participating retailers and growers, visit the PA PowerPort at www.state.pa.us, PA Keyword: "agriculture." For questions about the "Pennsylvania Produce — Simply Delicious" program, call the Department of Agriculture's Bureau of Market Development at (717) 787-6041.

Winter Wheat Production Expected To Be Up 22 Percent

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Based on June 1 conditions, Pennsylvania's 2002 production of winter wheat is expected to be 22 percent above 2001, according to the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service.

Winter wheat production in Pennsylvania is forecast at 10.15 million bushels, up 22 percent from last year's production of 8.32 million bushels. Farmers expect to harvest 175,000 acres with an average yield of 58.0 bushel per acre.

U.S. winter wheat production for 2002 is forecast at 1.24 billion bushels based on crop conditions as of June 1. This is down five percent from the May 1 forecast and nine percent below 2001 and is the lowest production since 1978. Based on June 1 conditions, the U.S. yield is forecast at 41.0 bushels per acre, down 2.1 bushels from the previous forecast. Grain area totals 30.2 million acres unchanged from May 1.

New PDA Building To Be Ready By Ag Progress Days

ROCKSPRINGS (Centre Co.) — Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes recently announced the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (PDA) is about to build another structure.

With construction underway at the Farm Show Complex and the new Livestock Evaluation Center, PDA began construction this week on a new exhibit and utility building at the Ag Progress Days site.

Secretary Hayes said, "Penn State hosts a great summer event each year at Ag Progress Days. I wanted the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture to have a permanent presence with Penn State at their event. Our new building will be a good showcase for agriculture."

Formerly, PDA used a tent and shared space at Ag Progress Days.

The new steel building will be 40' x 52' and will be located near the Special Events Building, the Red Barn, and the Headquarters Building at Ag Progress Days.

Bob Oberheim, PSU Ag Progress Days manager said, "We are very pleased the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture is constructing this permanent facility which will be one of the important anchor buildings on the upper grounds at the Ag Progress Days site."

Hayes added, "The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture also partners with Penn State near the Ag Progress Days site by providing financial resources for the College of Agricultural Sciences to conduct agricultural research in agronomy and horticulture.

"High tunnel research and new discoveries in tomato plants are just two examples of agricultural research sponsored by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture at the field plots on the university farms which adjoin the Ag Progress Days site.

"PDA is providing $2.68 million this year to the College of Agricultural Sciences for animal and plant research."

The building will be completed prior to Ag Progress Days in August. The facility will be the PDA headquarters and exhibit building during Ag Progress Days.

It will also serve as an auxiliary building for PDA's new $6.4 million Livestock Evaluation Center which is also under construction nearby in Ferguson Township. And, Secretary Hayes is offering the new building to the agriculture industry for events throughout the year.

Hayes concluded, "All of this new construction at the Department of Agriculture is for the agriculture community to use. Whether it is this new building, the new Livestock Evaluation Center, the new and upgraded Farm Show Complex, or the new greenhouse complex at PDA, I want the people in the agriculture community to know all these new structures are for them. All of this construction makes for a phenomenal and historic year at PDA."

Pennsylvania Farm Market, Consumer's Guide Available

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — To assist in the search for Pennsylvania's fruits and vegetables, Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes has announced that the 2002 edition of "A Consumer's Guide to Pennsylvania Farm Markets" is now available.

"This guide provides consumers with a listing, by county, of farmers' markets and roadside stands across Pennsylvania," Hayes said. "We encourage everyone to stop and purchase their favorite Pennsylvania produce from one of our many Pennsylvania farm markets."

Hayes said that "A Consumer's Guide to Pennsylvania Farm Markets" is provided as part of the "Pennsylvania Produce — Simply Delicious" program. Gov. Mark Schweiker recently kicked off the 2002 produce season by launching an expanded marketing campaign to promote the quality and wholesome goodness of "Simply Delicious" fruits and vegetables across the commonwealth.

State Farm Bureau Lauds Reform Of Legal System

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — The Pennsylvania Farm Bureau hailed passage of legislation by the General Assembly last week which reforms Pennsylvania's legal system to discourage the pursuit of "lawsuit lottery" by attorneys.

"Reform of our civil justice system has been a priority goal of our organization for many years," said Guy Donaldson, president of the statewide farm organization. "The system encouraging 'lawsuit lottery' has meant only one thing to our farmers — higher costs of doing business. Passage of this legislation is the best thing to happen to our state's legal system in 50 years."

The General Assembly has approved Senate Bill 1089, the Fair Share Act, which Gov. Schweiker has pledged to sign. The legislation reforms Pennsylvania's "joint and several liability" system whereby each defendant found liable in a civil lawsuit is responsible for paying the full amount of a verdict.

"Under joint and several liability, a defendant found to be only one percent responsible could be held liable for 100 percent of the damages," said Donaldson. "The system encourages a type of lawsuit abuse known as 'lawsuit lottery' whereby personal injury attorneys go after defendants with 'deep pockets' seeking huge awards no matter how much at fault the defendant actually was.

"'Lawsuit lottery' impacts farmers directly through higher business insurance costs, and also indirectly when a manufacturer's higher liability costs are reflected in higher purchase prices for their products. It also increases tax burdens because of the additional insurance governments must carry for self-protection."

The Fair Share Act replaces joint and several liability with a proportional liability system. Defendants would have to be found to be 60 percent or more responsible in order for joint and several liability to apply. The legislation maintains exceptions for negligence due to fraud and intentional acts, or involving environmental hazards and alcohol-related accidents.

Corn Weed Control Field Meetings Set

WEST LEROY (Bradford Co.) — A pair of field meetings are scheduled at the LeRoydale Farm near West Leroy to help corn producers evaluate several newer herbicide products for use in field corn. A series of herbicide plots have been established at the farm to help with the demonstration and evaluation of these products. The farm is owned and managed by Owen, Paul, and Jon Brackman.

The first meeting is scheduled for Tuesday, July 2 from 7:30 to 9 p.m. A second meeting which some producers may find more convenient is scheduled for Wednesday, July 3 from 12:30 till 2 p.m. There is no registration requirement and visitors can choose either time. It is anticipated the meeting will be worth one core and two category 01 updated credits.

The plots will help visitors compare costs, application timings, and the effectiveness of the various pre-emergent and post-emergent materials. Growers will then be able to determine how well the various programs might fit into their own corn production enterprise.

Penn State Cooperative Extension is sponsoring the meeting being hosted by Brackmans. The farm is located on Rt. 414 about five miles east of Canton. The field site is located just west of the farm buildings on the south side of Rt. 414. Signs will be posted from Rt. 414. Switchel and other refreshments will be provided by Terry Lutz, SULBRA Crop Management Association.

Another key part of the meeting will be a discussion about using the appropriate gloves for handling pesticides. Many times growers aren't certain which glove material is appropriate for the material being handled. Examples of the many glove types will be available to see and compare.

Participants interested in obtaining update credits should bring their restricted-use pesticide certificate to the meeting. Any questions about the program can be directed to Mark Madden at the Sullivan County extension office at (570) 928-8941.

Grange Urges Congress To "Wake-Up," Pass Medicare Prescription Drug Coverage

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Participants in the National Grange's annual Legislative Fly-In took out a full-page advertisement in the Capitol Hill newspaper, Roll Call, last week with an image of a rooster and the headline "Rural America Says: Wake Up! Pass Medicare Rx Coverage Now!"

Signed by 16 of the National Grange's most influential state legislative leaders, the ad reminded Congress that one out of three older Americans has no prescription drug coverage and that this dangerous reality has an enormous impact on rural Americans.

"For rural Americans, quality medical care and access to medicine are basically one and the same, thus rural seniors are especially at risk," said Leroy Watson, the National Grange's legislative affairs director. "The message in Roll Call says that exactly."

The one out of three older Americans without prescription coverage is a statistic that is a devastating reality, and the ad served to remind Congress and policy makers that this problem cannot be solved by risky drug importation plans or one-size-fits-all approaches. The National Grange called on Congress to act now by enacting coverage legislation that provides seniors with choice, options, access and quality.

Pennsylvania Farmers Union Offers Improvements To SB 1413

MIFFLINTOWN (Juniata Co.) — Pennsylvania Farmers Union is calling state Senate Bill 1413 a "Band-Aid approach" to addressing concerns with non-family farm operations.

PFU President Larry Breech said his organization is concerned that the amendment to the 1982 Right-to-Farm Law hinders municipalities from protecting its citizens and communities. Breech said PFU also questions whether the 1982 law (P.L. 454, No. 133) adequately protects Pennsylvania's family farms and communities.

"Pennsylvania Farmers Union stands ready to develop solutions that are in the best interest of our family farmers and our rural communities," Breech said. "Agriculture has changed dramatically in the last few years, and we need to be progressive in updating the relevance of our laws and regulations."

Breech offered several solutions to restore competition in agriculture, enforce social and environmental responsibility and protect family and rural communities. To ensure adequate competition in agricultural markets, PFU recommends a ban on corporate ownership of livestock held more than 14 days prior to slaughter and production contracts that ensure fairness and openness.

The family farm organization also supports: provisions to reduce or eliminate ammonia, ammonium or nitrate losses; regulations to control odor and particulate emissions; priorities to address water rights, availability and utilization; and science-based guidelines on where large-scale farming operations may be built. PFU also seeks provisions that require an agricultural corporation to be responsible for manure management and potential property devaluation as a result of its operation.

Aquatic Agriculture:
Holstein Convention Attendees Tour Lund's Fisheries

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

CAPE MAY, N.J. — A tour of Lund's Fisheries Incorporated was on the agenda during the National Holstein Convention.

The Cape May fishery's fleet of owner-operator fishing boats harvest a wide variety of fresh and frozen species every day, which include squid, mackerel, herring, monkfish, scup, and butterfish.

Twenty 80-160-foot boats and several 40-foot boats harvest the seafood, up to 300 tons in a day during the busy season. The business includes more than 120 employees during the busy season (October through April) and about 80 employees during the slow season.

Founded in 1954 by Warren Lund, the operation focused mainly on local, fresh seafood markets.

In the late 70's and early 80's Michael Byrne, vice president of the business, and Jeff Reichle noted the changing industry and saw the opportunity to harvest what the foreign fisheries had formerly taken — species such as squid and mackerel, considered "junk fish" because they were not in demand in American markets. Flounder, cod, scallops, said Byrne, could be considered "money fish."

The men spent time on Japanese ships, learning the processes involved in harvesting the seafood. They learned how to manage the fish and began to educate fishermenon proper handling techniques.

"Every year is a little different" in the export markets, said Byrne. Fish from Lund's Fisheries end up in the Mediterranean area such as Spain, Italy, and Greece or African countries such as Nigeria, Ghana, and Cameroon. Egypt also imports fish, along with China, Taiwan, Japan, Korea, Iceland, Canada, Venezuela, Brazil, Australia, and New Zealand.

Exhibiting in seafood shows such as events like the Boston Seafood Show in March or a seafood exhibition in China have helped establish business connections with foreign countries.

Overseas markets are not the only facet of their business, however. Ten tractor-trailers travel in different directions each night, taking much smaller orders — perhaps 100 pounds per invoice — to food distribution centers in large cities along the East Coast.

Busy, Slow Seasons

The fisheries operate on a busy and slow-season schedule. October through April, when the water temperatures in the Atlantic are changing, "fish school up and migrate," said Byrne. That alone helps the fishermen gather larger numbers of fish in more concentrated areas.

The overall range is from Cape Cod, Mass. to Cape Hatteras, N.C., but "not in one trip," according to Byrne. Although the smaller boats do complete fishing trips in one day, the larger boats are out for approximately two to three days.

Time is important, however, because "if the boat is taking fresh fish, once they put their first bag of fish on board, the clock is ticking," he said.

Traveling to Cape Cod in the early spring, the fishing boats wait for the mackerel, for example, to come south on their migration route. The fish then make a U-turn and head back up to Cape Cod.

"A boat can be on the mackerel for two or three days and experience (inclement) weather and have to come back. When the boats go back out, the crew might not have any clue where to go.

"It's amazing how far the fish can travel — they can swim 25 to 30 miles in a day in any direction. Crews can spend three to four days just searching."

Captains, however, may not be at a total loss in looking for the fish, with the help of written logs which record where the fish have been under certain conditions in past years. Also knowing the temperature or sea bottom conditions that the fish favor will help to pinpoint the fish.

"Fish finders," computer systems located in the ship, use sonar techniques to help locate the next catch.

Vice president of Lund's Fisheries, Michael Byrne stands on the fisher's dock with part of the fishery's fleet in the background.

Flying fish: traveling on a cushion of refrigerated seawater, the fish are transported from the ship to the processing facility 900 feet away at Lund's dock. A smaller pipe takes the seawater back to the ship's hold. "It's a closed loop, so we don't have to keep refrigerating in the water," said Byrne.

Employees pack cleaned squid. A by-product of the cleaning, "squid gurry" is sold to be made into aquaculture feed.

Once the fish are found, the stern trawlers let down two large boards on either side of the ship. Once they are in the water, the large boards, connected to the boat with a cable, spread and pull the net apart.

A chain is hooked to the bottom of the net for drag and floats hold the top of the net up. Since the net is larger at the front — with enough room for a 747 to fit inside — this creates a funnel shape which is pulled behind the boat.

The grid of the mesh is larger at the beginning and smaller toward the end of the funnel, allowing for the smaller fish to swim out.

The last section of the net, then, holds the fish. Instead of pulling them aboard, most of the fish are loaded from sea-level into the chambers below deck.

While the size of the net may sound impressive, the size of the schools can be even more so. "Captains have reported steaming over 35 miles of herring," said Byrne.

Below the factory deck, the boats may hold four tanks of chilled seawater. In addition, the ship may have fish-freezing capabilities. The crew sorts the fish by eye before the fish are frozen in blocks.

Sorting is usually straightforward, as "the species separate themselves out there, they stay with their own kind," said Byrne.

Lund's also dredges for clams and catches tuna via purse seining, as opposed to dragging. During purse seining, the net is run around the school of fish. Divers flip the dolphins over the encircling net before the fish are taken aboard.

Processing

Lund's houses their processing facilities at the dock. Once the ships dock, the fish are pumped in through large pipes to the processing facility 900 feet away by "fish pumps" that range from 40 to 80 horsepower.

While the frozen fish are already graded, the fresh fish, which constitute a much larger segment of Lund's business, must be machine-graded. The fish fall into appropriate channels of the machine that grade 35 tons of fish per hour.

Once through the grading room, they move on conveyor belts to the weighing hoppers. When the hoppers reach a designated weight, the bottom opens up and the fish fall into a plastic-lined box. Machines give each box a five-digit code that indicates the day of processing and the vessel where the fish originated. This information is useful for quality assurance and safety.

The boxes are then moved to the freezer. Four blast chambers freeze the fish in a hurry — in 17 hours, 75 tons of fish in each chamber are frozen. The freezing chambers operate at minus 40 degrees Fahrenheit.

Regulation

Fishing, as with any food production, is subject to regulation, according to Byrne. For example, scientists establish quotas called total allowable catches (TAC), which limit the number of seafood that fisheries can harvest.

Perhaps farmers, who count their harvest in numbers of tons, can appreciate the numbers that workers at Lund's Fisheries are familiar with. According to Byrne, Lunds' Fisheries is the largest mackerel producer in the U.S., harvesting 14,000-16,000 tons of mackerel a year. The TAC for mackerel is 200,000 per fishery.

These floats can be clipped to a net to bring the net higher or lower to adjust to conditions.

N.Y. Bill To Assist Farmers In Rabies Control

ALBANY, N.Y. — A bill sponsored by Assembly Agriculture Committee Chair Bill Magee (D-Nelson) to assist in protecting farmers, farm employees and the general public against the scourge of rabies has passed the Assembly.

"Clearly, rabies is one of the most petrifying and deadly diseases both from a livestock and human point of view," Magee said. "So there should be a clear mandate from New York State that we are ready, willing and able to assist farms and farmers in stopping it before it becomes a public health crisis."

The bill would specifically create a voluntary program under which the Department of Agriculture and Markets would purchase the vaccine and distribute it for free to veterinarians who would in turn administer it to cattle and livestock. As part of that, the veterinarians would be prohibited from charging for the vaccine and would have to agree to a fee schedule set forth by the Commissioner for what they can charge for inoculating the animals.

"This bill recognizes and balances the need to keep rabies vaccinations under the professional supervision of a veterinarian — to be sure it is properly stored, used and administered — while substantially reducing the cost so that more and more farmers are able to vaccinate their herds," Magee remarked.

While a relatively small number of cows are ever diagnosed with rabies they can still be exposed to it from, for instance, a rabid raccoon. While the overall cost of the program to the state would be approximately $2 million to purchase the vaccine, the cost of post exposure treatment for humans can be as much as $1,000 per person.

"This will cost the state some up-front money to actually purchase and distribute the vaccine, but the fact is that it is an enormous investment in preserving and protecting the overall health of the general public and that is what really matters," Magee concluded. The bill is sponsored in the Senate by Senator John R. Kuhl Jr. (R-Hammondsport).

Kozel's Wins Beef Backer Award

WESTMORELAND, N.Y. — Kozel's Restaurant, a well-known steakhouse in Ghent, N.Y., received the Beef Backer Award on May 30 presented by the New York Beef Industry Council on behalf of New York State beef producers. The award, which has been given in the Empire State since 1989, recognizes restaurants for their innovations in menuing and merchandising beef.

In business for 66 years, Kozel's brings in 40 percent of its profits from beef, purchasing approximately 3,500 pounds per month. The restaurant was established in 1936 by Frank and Eva Kozel. Its current owners, Edward "Gus" Kozel and his wife Helen, attribute the longevity of the restaurant to the dedication of the kitchen and wait staff.

Many of the employees have been employed by the restaurant for over 20 years, and the two head chefs, Ronnie Glover and Tom Kardash, have a combined total of 69 years in the Kozel kitchen.

According to Steve Walker, dairy farmer and vice chairman of the New York Beef Industry Council (NYBIC), Kozel's is well deserving of the award. "Kozel's Restaurant has 14 beef entrees on its regular menu and for decades has been well-known for its prime quality beef selections. As producers, we depend on establishments such as Kozel's to continue the quality we strive for on our farms."

Edward "Gus" Kozel and his wife Helen are the 2002 recipients of the Beef Backer Award. NYBIC Vice Chairman Steve Walker, right, presented the award at Kozel's Restaurant on May 30.

Consumer demand for beef has been on the upswing since 1999, making the beef industry one of the most dynamic segments of the U.S. agricultural economy. More than ever, American consumers look to restaurants for their dinner needs. In fact, 41 percent of all food dollars are spent in restaurants and in 2001 there are seven billion beef servings in commercial restaurants in the United States.

Thirty-eight percent of restaurateurs list beef as their most popular center-of-the-plate dinner entree in 2000.

The summer issue of Foraging Around, the newsletter of the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council, is scheduled July 13 in Lancaster Farming.

The section is scheduled to include feature information about Project Grass. Included: grazier features, grass-fed beef reports, and news and notes for the grazier and hay grower.

Sheppard Family Hosts Holstein Convention Tour

Progressive N.J. Vegetable Growers Build On Three Centuries Of Family Farming

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

CEDARVILLE, N.J. — Brothers David, Erwin, and Tom Sheppard have inherited a long tradition of farming in southern New Jersey.

"We have a three-day jump on California." Tom Sheppard shows off head of fresh iceberg lettuce.

Their great-grandfather, Timothy, bought the family's first farm near Cedarville beside the salty tidal marshes of the Delaware Bay in the early 1800s. But the English family had left its farms in Ireland and migrated to southern New Jersey more than a century before that.

"Sheppards have been farming in Cumberland County since 1682," said Tom Sheppard, youngest of the three brothers who manage the 1,500 acres of vegetable fields and packing facilities near Cedarville.

The Sheppard's hosted a group of National Holstein Convention-goers Tuesday as part of a tour schedule that spotlighted the diverse agriculture of New Jersey.

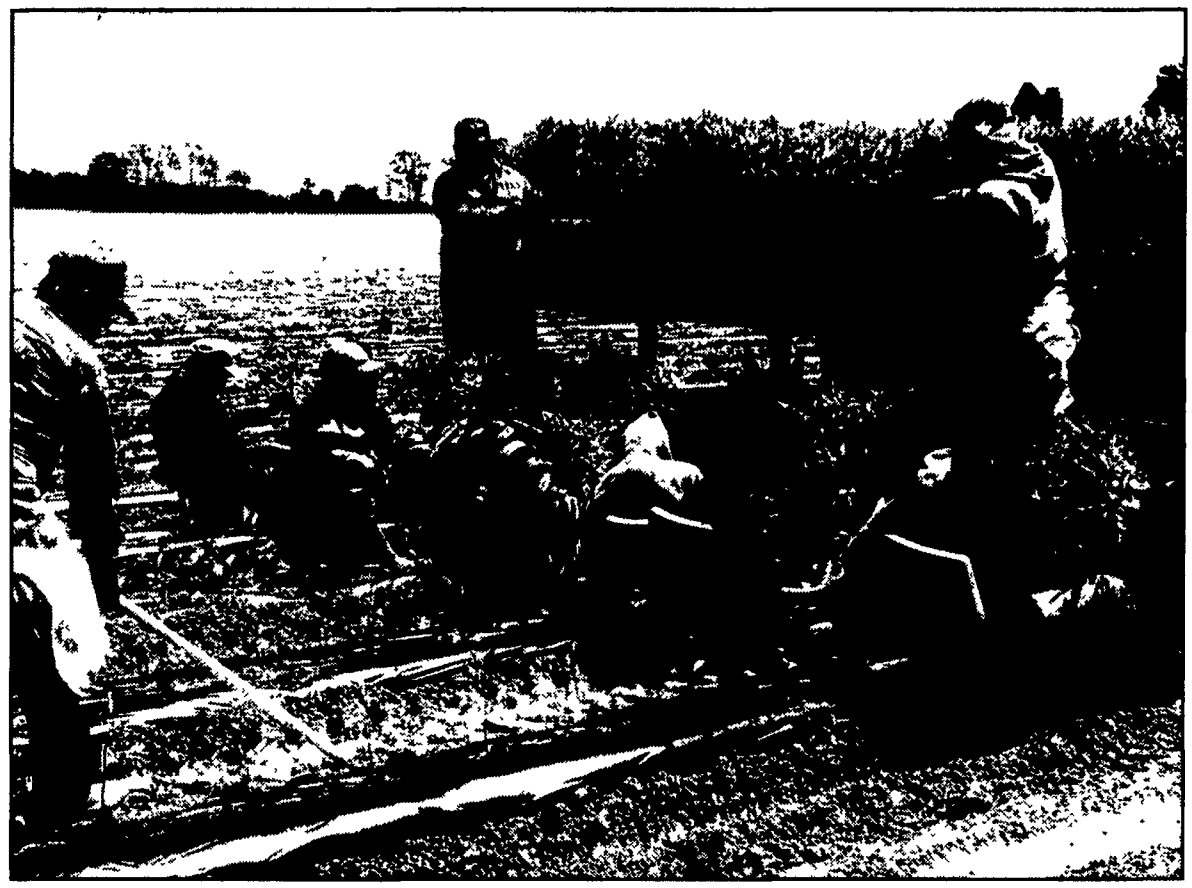
While for many people New Jersey may evoke images of urban sprawl, this part of the state is remarkably open and sparse. In fact, the area around Sheppard Farms has seen its population shrink in the last half-century, as small farming operations gave way to larger farms.

"There are not half as many houses on this street as when I was a kid," Tom said.

"New Jersey is the highest populated state in the union per square mile — except for here."

The Sheppards own about 1,000 of the 1,500 acres they farm here, producing bell peppers, cucumbers, zucchini squash, asparagus, and various types of lettuce for wholesale buyers up and down the east coast, Canada, and as far west as Texas.

According to Tom, each of the brothers applies his own natural expertise to growing and selling the produce. David is the agronomist, Erwin the engineer, and Tom the marketer.



Crew plants peppers with waterwheel planter on Sheppard Farms.

Ramon Vera, left, and Javier Almanza harvest Romaine lettuce on Sheppard Farms. The lettuce is contracted to a ready-made salad distributor.

Their grandfather, Gilbert Sheppard, was the first in the family to focus on vegetable farming, introducing Boston and iceberg lettuce to the area. In the 1920s, he bought the family's first "tractor," a steam engine that was used mainly to power and to steam-sterilize greenhouse beds on the farm.

Being located beside the Delaware Bay offers both pros and cons to growing vegetables. While the large body of saltwater helps moderate temperatures and reduce the risk of frost, high tides can also bring an influx of salty water into nearby fields. To prevent the salinity from harming crops and to aid drainage, the Sheppards have constructed a series of gated channels along fields bordering the bay. These gates automatically close during high tide, but open to let any water in the fields flow out to the bay during low tide.

The sandy soils in the Sheppards' fields offer good drainage for the crops but are low in organic matter — between .5 and 1 percent.

"The soil around here doesn't naturally have much organic matter," Tom said. One of the techniques the Sheppards are using to increase organic matter is growing cover crops such as sorghum, Sudangrass, and crimson clover to plow down between vegetable crops. Wheat and other small grains are also rotated with the vegetables.

Irrigation is a mainstay on Sheppard Farms.

"Every acre of ours has underground line," Tom said. Both drip and spray irrigation are used, depending on the type of crop.

The vegetables are planted, picked, and packed with the help of modern machinery and about 160 seasonal workers, many of them Hispanic. Some of the workers are employed year-around and have been able to bring their wife and children to live in the area, Tom said.

Vegetables plants are started in 19 LP-gas-heated greenhouses on the farm until planting outside by means of "waterwheel" planters.

"Anything we transplant we start ourselves," Tom said.

Deer, geese, and wild turkey are a threat to new crops in the field, causing an estimated $10,000 to $20,000 of damage each year, according to Tom.

Another challenge to the thriving vegetable business is volatile markets. While wholesale lettuce prices soared to a "historic high" in February and March, it "hit the skids" at Easter, Tom said.

One way to manage the risk of fluctuating markets is by contracting some produce to buyers. This year, for example, the Sheppards have contracted their crop of Romaine lettuce to a company that distributes ready-made and packed salads to retail outlets.

While producers from warmer areas such as California and Florida have certain advantages —such as longer growing seasons— Tom pointed out that New Jersey's proximity to eastern cities allows Sheppard Farms' produce to reach major outlets in much less time. For produce such as lettuce with a short shelf life, the difference in freshness can be significant.

"We have three-day jump on California," Tom said.

National Holstein Convention Honors Juniors At Awards Banquet

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — According to one motivational speaker, to succeed in the dairy business, you have to "hang out with the great ones."

Apparently, some junior members of the Holstein Association USA took that to heart a long time ago, winning recognition Thursday afternoon at the junior awards banquet at the Trump Taj Mahal in Atlantic City.

Dan Clark, professional speaker, songwriter/recording artist, and New York Times best-selling author, spoke about several key words for success to about 400 junior members and friends during the National Holstein Convention.

One key word is "influence," Clark said. "Dream a mighty dream and hang around with the right people to make that dream come true."

Clark offered up several personal stories of heroism in light of the events of Sept. 11. Raised in Phoenix, Ariz., Clark said both his mom and dad came from farms.

He urged the youth from 26 states visiting Atlantic City to listen and learn from those in the dairy industry, reminding them if they don't carry on the work, who will? "We desperately need you to sustain that course for the benefit of all mankind," he said.

The National Holstein Women's Scholarship Program awarded seven $1,500 scholarships to junior members Thursday afternoon. Those receiving scholarships are Emilie Blough, Goshen, Ind.; Gary Browning III, Finksburg, Md.; Fred Haines, Maryland; Amy Kulick, Carlisle; Kyle Sonnek, Foreston, Minn.; Allison Specht, Dover, Ohio; and Darcy Bile.

Houser Voted Region II Director

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — As of presstime, the National Holstein Convention was still busy voting for new directors at the 2002 Holstein Association USA National Convention here at the Trump Taj Mahal.

Jay H. Houser, Spring Mills, narrowly defeated James R. Burdette, Mercersburg, for a region II position after a tie-breaking vote was called.

Houser, in addressing the delegates Thursday morning, noted the importance of, rather than paying back, "paying forward," in his plan to serve as director.

and efficiency in handling large volumes of lettuce are two vacuum coolers, each the size of a small house trailer. These coolers drop the temperature of lettuce to 36 degrees Farenheit in 20 minutes by creating a vacuum which greatly increases the rate of evaporation of water from the leaf surfaces.

Bell peppers generate about 60 percent of the cash income of the crops grown on Sheppard Farms, with lettuce, cucumbers, squash, and asparagus accounting for the most of the remainder.

Asparagus was a mainstay for New Jersey produce farmers until the 1960s when it was practically wiped out by disease. Since then, Rutgers University has developed resistant varieties, including 'Jersey Knight,' the major type of asparagus grown on about 150 acres at Sheppard Farms.

David Sheppard stands by steam engine first owned by his grandfather, Gilbert Sheppard, in the 1920s. The engine was used to run a sawmill and steam-sterilize vegetable beds in the greenhouse.

CONCERNS WITH FOREST PROPERTY TAXES IN PENNSYLVANIA

Michael Jacobson
Penn State Forest Resources Extension Specialist

Although there is a preferential tax for forestland in Pennsylvania, there are concerns about the program among private forest landowners, forest industry representatives, and county officials. The preferential tax program commonly known as Clean and Green bases the assessment on the land's ability to produce income in its current use, rather than its fair market value.

The Pennsylvania legislature created Clean and Green in 1974 with the objective of conserving farm and forestland by providing tax incentives for landowners not to convert their land to other uses. The program objectives are especially important in urbanizing counties where development pressures are high.

The preferential assessment under Clean and Green is formula-based. It uses projected timber yields, current stumpage prices, and interest rates to determine use values for an 80-year timber rotation. Until recently, landowners were less concerned with the formula's use values, since stumpage prices were low and interest rates high. Thus, the assessed value for forestland remained relatively low. However, in the 1990s, low inflation (resulting in lower interest rates) and rapidly escalating stumpage prices drove the Clean and Green assessments for forestland higher. Nevertheless, a recent Penn State study shows only 23 percent of the landowners surveyed believe that the Clean and Green assessed values are too high.

Currently, landowners enroll in the voluntary Clean and Green program only in counties with recent reassessments. Many of Pennsylvania's 67 counties have not recently reassessed property values; so assessed values are lower than the use values available under Clean and Green. There were over two million acres (one-sixth of private forestland) enrolled in the Clean and Green program in 2000.

An issue with landowners is the so-called deferred income problem. Unlike farmers, many forest landowners only have timber income from their forestland once in the lifetime (when they harvest). However, they pay annual property taxes. Calculations show that even with the preferential assessment, the compounded value of the annual tax payments over an 80 to 100-year rotation is generally far greater than the revenues from timber harvests. Another landowner complaint is that actual forestland value can vary quite widely within the same county. However, the Clean and Green assessed rate within a county is the same for all landowners.

Many tax assessors and commissioners say that the assessed values derived from the current use value formula are too low in their counties. Traditionally, property taxes fund schools and local governments.

One particular concern among county officials is a recent amendment to the law. The amendment allows the land under a house, known as the "farmstead," to be assessed at Clean and Green rates and count toward the 10-acre minimum area. This provision is especially hard on rural counties where the fair market valuation for the "farmstead" acre comprised a significant portion of their tax revenues. The provision may also encourage developers to subdivide larger properties into 10-acre "mini-estates" that meet the size requirements for Clean and Green, but do not provide the kind of open space that the law was intended to protect. These "mini-estate" owners could pay considerably less in property taxes than people who own lower-value residences on smaller parcels in the same county.

As large forestlands are subdivided, it often makes forest management more difficult, and many of the smaller parcels are essentially removed from the land base that supports Pennsylvania's forest products industry.

Another point of contention with Clean and Green is that the penalties for withdrawing from the program are not high enough compared to the potential profit from developing the land. Many government officials believe that the penalties do little to prevent developers from purchasing land and enrolling it in the program until the time is right to develop the property. In this way, the program can reduce the cost of land speculation, potentially encouraging development.

As with any tax, there are complaints from all sides: county officials, landowners, rural counties, and urban counties. What is clear, though, is that there are issues to address with the Clean and Green program for forestland.

The Penn Jersey builders did excellent work. They knew what they were doing and they got the job done! They were a good bunch of guys. I don't know where Penn Jersey finds such good people."

Kari Martin Reigns In Lancaster County

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Kari Martin, Ephrata, is the new Lancaster County Dairy Princess.

Coronation for the 17-year-old was conducted at the Farm and Home Center, Lancaster, last Saturday evening. Festivities included inducting 12 dairy ambassadors, seven dairy misses, and seven dairy darlings to help Kari tout the goodness of milk throughout the county.

Kari is the oldest of the three daughters of Leonard and Joyce Martin. Jenna and Stephanie are Kari's two younger sisters.

A senior at Ephrata High School, Kari participates in 4-H and FFA activities. She serves as historian of the Cloister FFA chapter.

Church activities are also a priority in Kari's life. She has been elected president of her church youth group. An active member of the Ephrata-Cocalico Community 4-H Club, Kari is constructing her own gown for pageant.

Promoting the dairy industry is nothing new for Kari. She not only served as a dairy darling as a young girl, but also has served 3 consecutive years as a dairy ambassador for Lancaster County.

Presenting a skit at the pageant as "Mama" of "Mama's Pizza" Kari presented a lively sketch full of nutritional and dairy farming information for the elementary school audiences it is intended for. "Mama" always makes sure she uses extra cheese so her customers can become as strong as she is.

Volunteering to assist the princesses as dairy ambassadors are 12 young ladies. Returning for a third year are Jenna Martin, daughter of Leonard and Joyce Martin, Ephrata; Stephanie Donough, daughter of Timothy and Brenda Donough, Bainbridge; and Cheryl Hershey, daughter of Dale and Martha Hershey, Ronks.

Young women serving their second year as dairy ambassador include Apryl Becker, whose parents are Merle and Janet Becker, Kinzers; Alysha Royer, daughter of Lynn and Sara Royer, Lancaster; and Karen Shaub, whose parents are Kirk and Shirley Shaub.

Seven new dairy ambassadors include Angela Becker, daughter of Janet and Merle Becker, Kinzers; Tiffany Donough, daughter of Tim and Brenda Donough, Bainbridge; Debbie Groff, daughter of Dean and Darlene Groff, Kinzers; Lori Hess, Pequea, daughter of Charles and Lois Hess; Amanda Royer, Lynn and Sara Royer's daughter, Lancaster; and April Shaub, daughter of Kirk and Shirley Shaub.

A new feature of this year's pageant was a speech competition among the ambassadors. The top speech of the novice (first year) and experienced ambassadors was presented at the pageant. Winner of the Novice Division was Lori Hess, Pequea, with a speech about the outstanding nutritional value of milk and where and how that product originates. Amanda Royer of Lancaster gave the second place speech in this category.

Alysha Royer, Lancaster, presented an outstanding speech describing her adjustment to 'life on the farm', after her family moved to the home farm when housing became available to them. They had previously lived in a housing development. She is now much more appreciative of the trials and tribulations of farm life. Stephanie Donough of Bainbridge presented the second place speech in the experienced division.

Seven dairy misses include Emily Glick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Merle Glick of Strasburg; Dawnell Groff, Kinzers, daughter of Dean and Darlene Groff; Stephanie and Toni Kauffman, Denver, daughters of Harold and Anne Kauffman; Jennifer Royer, daughter of Lynn and Sara Royer, Lancaster; and Katelyn Ursery and Adrianne Ranck, daughters of Eldon Ranck and Tammy Ursery, Lancaster.

Rounding out the Lancaster Dairy Promotion team are the seven youngest members, the dairy darlings: Danielle Brown, daughter of Kapp (Mike) and Linda Brown who reside in Mount Joy; Molly Brubaker of Mount Joy, the daughter of Mike and Lisa Brubaker; Terri Kauffman, also the daughter of Harold and Anne Kauffman of Denver; Courtney Keener, Columbia, Arlen and Kathy Keener's daughter; Lindsay and Sarabeth Royer, twin daughters of Lynne and Sara Royer of Lancaster; and Olivia Ursery, daughter of Eldon Ranck and Tammy Ursery of Lancaster.

Gerry Phillips, of Mid-Atlantic Farm Credit presented Dairy of Distinction Awards to three Lancaster County farmers. Winners were judged on the general cleanliness and attractiveness of their farmstead.

Frey Dairy Farm, Inc, Tom Frey, of Conestoga; Hilltop-Heritage Holsteins, Lowell and Deb Brubaker, Manheim; and Zimhaven Farm, Mr. & Mrs. Dale L. Zimmerman, East Earl, were the recipients of the award which includes a plaque and attractive farm sign .

In her farewell address, the former Lancaster County Dairy Princess Anne Fisher thanked all those who helped her. She was especially appreciative to all who helped her especially her savior, Jesus for his constant love and strength; her mom, who often served as her personal secretary; her dad for his directions; and her family and friends for their constant encouragement and guidance.

Dale Smith and each dairy promotion committee member were thanked for leading and encouraging her through the year. The assistance and cooperation of her fellow dairy royalty was also an invaluable asset to the success of her reign. Anne now has a better appreciation for the hard work dairy farmers do tirelessly day after day.

Anne and her alternate dairy princess, Heather Brubaker, presented Kari with her sash, crown, and a dozen roses.

Kari then commented that she felt it was a great honor to become the Lancaster County Dairy Princess, despite the fact that she was the only one running. Of her father and grandparents, Kari said that she appreciated they stuck with dairy farming through tough times.

Encouraging her royal court, Kari told them not to despair when things got hectic during the year. She also asked the dairy farmers to pray for her during her reign.

Judges for the pageant included Allen Tate, Lancaster, president of Junior Achievement of Central Pennsylvania. He had been the director of communications and marketing services for Weaver Inc., now known as Tyson Foods, for 20 years. Pat Miller, a retired farm wife and co-owner of Great View Farm has been involved in dairy promotion for many years. She is a former South Central District Coordinator and was the treasurer of the state Dairy Princess Program. Co-owner of Brown Switch Swiss and White Switch Holsteins, Joy Crothers also assisted in the judging process. As a dairy agent in Cecil Co. Maryland, Joy organized the first dairy promotion committee there. She then went on to serve as the state director for the Maryland Dairy Princess Program. She served two terms on the PA Dairy Promotion Board and is currently vice-president of the PA Dairyman's Assn.

Pianist for the event was Brenda Hoover, Gap, sister of the 2000 Lancaster County Dairy Princess Jill Hoover. Brenda composed an original piece for the Dairy Royalty procession.

Emcee for the evening was Elizabeth Smith Ackerman who did an outstanding job keeping the activities moving at a lively pace, and handling all introductions with grace and ease.

An ice cream social concluded the event.

Kari Martin reigns as the Lancaster County Dairy Princess.

"Mamma" of Mamma's Pizza always makes sure she uses extra cheese so her customers can become as strong as she is.

Lancaster County Dairy Princess Kari Martin is surrounded by those who are eager to promote the dairy industry. On Being a Farm Wife

Joyce Bupp

These visitors are early this year.

Which is why it was a surprise to dash through the front door on the first official day of summer and stop short, snagged in one of the most ambitious cobwebs strung in our house for awhile.

The geometric weaving stretched from one side to the other of the door frame, completely engulfing the upper third of the doorway. My dash through the doorway en route to the barn left me with silken strands threaded through my hair, while destroying a night's worth of hard labor for this ambitious insect.

What gives? Having spider housemates in our old farmhouse is neither new, nor surprising. They usually turn up, en masse, as summer is winding down. Why two months early? Do they know something that we don't?

Maybe it was because our door screens, normally installed by late spring, were still in the attic. So the air currents usually drifting through the doorway — which deter spider craftsmanship — were absent. With the constant movement of equipment past the house and our continuing drought conditions, a few less screens probably help minimize the dust that seems to settle on everything.

If it's a toss-up between cleaning spider webs or dust, the spider webs probably win. They're less hard on the innards of electronics, like computers and fax machines.

Another surprise visitor turned up on the other side of the house about the same time the spider was spinning. This guest wasn't dangling from a door frame, but was first spotted busily rooting around the grass at the bottom of the big, old maple tree, right beneath the bird feeder filled with sunflower seeds.

It's nearly a year since we lost our resident backyard squirrel and I've missed having a bushy tail to watch bopping around the yard. So the fluffy appendage waving from the grass was like a greeting from an old friend. Except this is an obviously younger and considerably thinner version of the pudgy mother squirrel that raised several litters among the thick, sprawling cover of our old trees. She was victimized by another mother, our now-deceased Mama Cat whose calico body was a fixture in the dairy barn as she patrolled for rats.

When it came to feeding her kittens, Mama Cat didn't differentiate: a rodent was a rodent, rat, mouse, squirrel, whatever. Her daughter, also calico but not as colorful as the original, is fast filling her shoes — paws? — on barn rat patrol. The replacement squirrel had best beware of the replacement cat.

Meanwhile, a fluffy tail waves for extended periods of time from the bird feeder, while the front end is busy scarfing down sunflower seeds. None of the regular diners — titmice, finches, doves and an extremely noisy blue jay — seem the least intimidated by the newcomer.

While we don't always see them, a distinctive guttural squawk signals the return of interesting winged visitors that arrive every year about this time. They're elusive birds, zipping up through the meadow like tiny fighter jets and disappearing into the thick, hanging limbs of the willow trees.

Willow limbs which hang out over the goldfish pond are their favorite perches, probably for a couple of reasons. One no doubt is that the "green guys," as The Farmer has dubbed these slender, little green herons, are almost impossible to spot once they are perched among the willowy foliage.

An even better reason is that it's a straight shot from those limbs down to the water's surface, where the goldfish show up like beacons. From the regularity of the visitors' calls, they apparently find our pond "sushi bar" to be much to their liking. At the rate the ponds are drying up, with greatly diminished spring flows and falling underground water levels, the herons might as well get them before a lack of water does.

Our wildlife, bird life, even insect life, visitors provide us with continuing, interesting entertainment and add a dimension to our days that we would sadly miss if they were absent.

Now if we could just get some steady, soaking, rainfall to drop about once a week, our guest list would be complete.

'Insects In The Landscape': Plant Health Care Workshop July 31-Aug. 1

WOOSTER, Ohio — Insects are everywhere, including — or especially — in yards and gardens. Some are bad for plants. Some are good. The fifth annual Ohio State University Plant Health Care Workshop will show how to tell them apart and manage them.

"Insects in the Landscape: Identification and Management of Pests and Beneficials" is July 31-Aug. 1 at the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center's Wooster campus.

The program, led by scientists from Ohio State and other universities, combines proven concepts with practical information. There will be lectures, hands-on laboratory sessions and diagnostic walks in OARDC's Secrest Arboretum.

The goal is to help plant professionals manage ornamental landscapes and urban forests.

Among the topics: using a "biological calendar" to predict when pests are most vulnerable, employing natural enemies to control pests, and using new, biorational pesticides against key pests.

The schedule, which starts at 8 a.m. the first day and ends at 4:30 p.m. the second, features the following presentations and instructors:

- "Coexisting with Insects, the World's Dominant Life Form," Dave Horn, Ohio State.
- "Insect Identification: Finding Order in Overwhelming Diversity," Dave Shetlar, Ohio State.
- "Integrated Pest Management and Plant Health Care: A Historical Perspective," Dave Nielsen, Ohio State.
- "Monitoring Strategies, Degree Days and Phenology," Dan Herms, Ohio State.
- "Evening Insect Walk in Secrest Arboretum: Diagnostics, Pests and Natural Enemies," Joe Boggs and Jim Chatfield, OSU Extension, and Ken Cochran, arboretum curator.
- "Focus on Beneficial Insects" (identification, biology, ecology and laboratory training), Cliff Sadof, Purdue University, and Paula Shrewsbury and Mike Raupp, University of Maryland.
- "Management Strategies for Key Pests" (borers, scales, spider mites, and exotic and invasive insects), Herms, Sadof, Nielsen and Boggs.

Thirteen International Society of Arboriculture continuing-education credits and 10 hours of Ohio Department of Agriculture pesticide-recertification credits (6a, ornamentals) are available for attending.

Registration is limited to 40 people. The $225 registration fee includes breakfast and lunch both days, dinner on the first day, all sessions, and reference materials.

The registration deadline is July 17.

Lodging is available at the adjacent Ohio State University Agricultural Technical Institute and at Wooster-area motels.

For program and registration information, contact Denise Ellsworth, Stark/Summit Counties office, OSU Extension, (330) 497-1611, ext. 21, ellsworth.2@osu.edu, or Phyllis McMaster of the same office, ext. 14, mcmaster.12@osu.edu.

Co-sponsors are Secrest Arboretum, OSU Extension, and the Ohio chapter of the International Society of Arboriculture.

Secrest Arboretum is an 85-acre research collection that's home to more than 5,000 types of trees, shrubs and herbaceous perennials. Included are extensive plantings of shade trees, conifers, crabapples, azaleas, rhododendrons and old-fashioned roses.

ATI, OARDC and OSU Extension are part of Ohio State's College of Food, Agricultural, and Environmental Sciences.

"What color is your diet?"

"What Color is Your Diet" is the title of a recent book by Dr. Heber, M.D., PhD from UCLA.

We have all heard by now about the benefits of eating brightly-colored vegetables and fruits for health. The vivid and deep-colored vegetables contain antioxidants which have shown to reduce the risk of many types of cancers. Along with the deep orange, yellow, and green vegetables, there is another "color" getting a lot of attention lately—red.

Can pizza, spaghetti, and lasagna actually be considered "health foods"?

Yes.

Tomatoes and tomato products are shown to contain a potent antioxidant called lycopene. This antioxidant fights the uncontrolled growth of cells into tumors. Research shows that men who eat 10 servings of tomatoes per week have been shown to reduce their risk of prostate cancer by 66 percent!

For years, scientists did not think lycopene had antioxidant effects like beta-carotene or other carotenoids. That belief changed after research showed otherwise. A study in the December 19, 2001 edition of the Journal of the National Cancer Institute reported that daily consumption of tomato sauce increased lycopene levels in both blood and prostate tissue.

The damage to DNA in white blood cells and prostate tissue was lowered at the same time. In addition, serum PSA (prostate specific antigen, a marker for progression of prostate cancer) was also lower.

Eating tomato products has also been shown to reduce the risk of lung and stomach cancer. In one study, researchers at Harlem Hospital Center/Columbia University found that patients with lung cancer had significantly lower than normal levels of lycopene. After accounting for age, gender, race, smoking, alcohol consumption, and other potential influences of cancer risk, researchers found that people with the lowest lycopene levels had a cancer risk about three times higher than people with the highest lycopene levels.

In African-Americans, those with the lowest lycopene levels had an eight-fold higher risk for cancer compared with those with the highest lycopene levels. Even when looking just at smokers, those with the lowest levels of lycopene were four times as likely to get lung cancer than those with the highest concentrations, the study showed. Another study in Finland revealed that lycopene may also decrease the risk of heart disease and stroke. The data showed that the men with the lowest serum lycopene levels have a more than three-fold increased risk of heart disease or stroke. This study appeared in the June 2001 edition of the British Journal of Nutrition.

Taking an average of 15 milligrams of lycopene dailywhich is as little as two to four servings a day can dramatically protect your prostate. A serving would be one tomato, one cup of tomato sauce, or 8 ounces tomato juice or V-8 juice.

The red pigment, lycopene, is also found in much lower amounts in watermelon and pink grapefruit.

Research has been so positive that the American Dietetic Association is teaming up with ConAgra Foods to educate consumers on the health benefits of lycopene.

The nutrition messages will be printed on packages and labels of Hunt's tomato products and in related promotional materials in supermarkets. The program will roll out gradually beginning early this summer.

Remember that popping a pill is not the answer. Eating a wide variety of fruits and vegetables, along with foods containing tomato products, will help you to "color" your diet in a healthful way.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

We've just had a busy weekend. Our daughter from Maine arrived with her three little boys. As the youngest is less than 2-years-old, we had to move a lot of knickknacks to higher ground. First he used a chair to reach my fish bowl but when we moved it to the top of the refrigerator, he pulled a kitchen stool over to it.

They arrived with a wide assortment of toys and tapes to play on their television from their van. I am amazed at the variety of things to keep them occupied. However, sometimes simply taking a long walk or picking the last strawberries from our patch was interesting.

Another family arrived from New Jersey, and this required more cooking. I accidentally discovered another way to make pig stomach. Usually I dice potatoes and add them to the pork sausage before sewing it shut. This time I slid the pan into the oven before realizing that the peeled potatoes were still on the counter in a kettle. By adding just bread crumbs, I found that it was even better than usual.

Even though I have lots of children's book that they can choose from, they wanted the same ones read over and over again. When I complained that my voice was giving out, they said that I could just read half of the book to them.

Before they came, I took an hour on two different evenings to go fishing in the Conestoga River. The first time I managed to get four panfish. There were wild geese, squirrels and a great blue heron to watch. Cows were in a nearby pasture but generally it was very quiet. There are many isolated spots along the river on our farm.

Perry County Selects Dairy Princess

LANDISBURG (Perry Co.) — On June 1, Amber Rock was crowned the Perry County dairy princess. Amber is the daughter of Brian Rock of Landisburg and will be a junior at West Perry High School.

Amanda Kresge of Loysville was crowned Perry County's alternate dairy princess. Her parents are Lenard and Amy Kresge. Amanda will also be a junior at West Perry High School.

Amber has been very active in the dairy industry. She belonged to the Perry County 4-H Dairy Club holding numerous offices and showing Holstein and Jersey heifers. Amber is also active in the West Perry FFA chapter and competes in dairy judging on the state level. When not working with her animals Amber likes to swim, run, and do anything outdoors.

Informing the public about the dairy industry is Amber's goal for the coming year.

"It is important that people know how hard the dairy farmers work to get them their dairy products and they need to know why they need the recommended amount of dairy in their diets."

Amanda is an avid 4-H'er belonging to the dairy club, goat club, Kistler Clovers and the Perry County 4-H council. She has exhibited her animals at the county fair, competed in the supreme showmanship contest as well participating in dairy judging. Amanda is also a West Perry FFA member and a member of St. Paul's Lutheran Church. Reading, cross-stitching, and crocheting are some of the things she likes to do when not helping on her family's Loysville farm.

Amber and Amanda will be assisted in their promotion activities by Perry County Dairy Ambassadors Amanda Rock and Allycia Trout; Dairy Maid Kimberly Adams; Dairy Miss Natalie Adams; and Li'l Misses Alexandra Albright, Brook Albright, Paige Albright, Katie Osborne, Kaitlin Trout, and Shawna Weller.

Dairy Recipe Entries Wrap Up June Dairy Month Celebration

This is the fifth and final installation of recipe entries for the June Dairy Month Drawing.

Thanks to the hundreds of readers who sent in their favorite recipes using at least one dairy product. According to the attached letters, readers of all ages are busy with many different stages of life and work. They share a common bond of enjoying this section of Lancaster Farming.

Although this is the final installation of dairy recipe entries for this year, we know from hearing from you that the pleasure of preparing these recipes will be enjoyed for many years.

Don't forget, your recipes are welcomed every week in answer to Cook's Question printed weekly on page B8 and in answer to the recipe topics boxed on this page.

GOAT CHEESE, ARTICHOKE AND SMOKED HAM BRUNCH CASSEROLE

2 cups whole milk
¼ cup olive oil
8 cups Italian bread, cut into 1-inch cubes
1½ cups whipping cream
5 large eggs, beaten
1 tablespoon garlic, chopped
1½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon black pepper
½ teaspoon ground nutmeg
3 cups soft fresh goat cheese, crumbled
1 tablespoon fresh basil, chopped
1 tablespoon fresh thyme, chopped
½ teaspoon fennel seed
12-ounces smoked ham, chopped into bite-sized pieces
2½ cups marinated artichoke hearts, drained, chopped
1½ cups mozzarella cheese, grated
½ cup Parmesan cheese, grated

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Butter 9x13-inch glass baking dish. In a large bowl, whisk together milk and olive oil. Stir in bread cubes and let stand until liquid is absorbed. Whisk cream, eggs, garlic, salt, ground pepper, and nutmeg in another large bowl. Gently stir in goat cheese. Mix basil, thyme, and fennel seed together in small bowl to blend flavors.

Place half the bread mixture in prepared baking dish. Top with half the ham, artichoke hearts, herbs, and cheeses. Pour half of cream cheese mixture over top. Repeat layering with remaining bread, ham, artichoke hearts, herbs, cheeses, and cream mixture. Bake uncovered until firm in center and edges are golden brown, about one hour.

My husband Dave and I purchased our Douglassville farmhouse in August 2001, and were married there on a glorious fall day in October.

For the past couple years, we have raised a few chickens and are now the proud parents of 15 additional, rapidly growing baby chicks. The "cat's meow" of chicken coops has just been completed, and now, happy as can be, all 19 of them are a joyous little family. In honor of our recent adventure, we have named our property Egg Haven Farm.

Born and raised in Michigan, my love for food cycles back to my long-awaited summer visits to my grandparents' 100-acre farm in Milan, Mich. Still today, if the wind blows in the right direction, I can smell the fragrant blossoms of dill, sweet peas, and lilacs, as it immediately takes me back to the place in time I loved so much. At the heels of my grandmother, I stayed, year after year, as she created some of the most incredible edibles I have ever experienced. With Bohemian blood, you expect the best — from pastries, homemade soups, and dumplings with grass (dill) gravy, to fresh garden vegetables and crunchy garlic dills.

From a young child until now my solitude rests completely in the kitchen (although as an avid gardener, my focus is elsewhere during summer months). With the assistance of my husband's unbelievable talents, we will be completing a rustic potting shed and picketed cottage garden later this year. I am a graphic designer by trade and am in the beginning stages of writing and illustrating a cookbook. I look forward to the day I can call it complete.

I want to thank you very much for bringing extra joy to my Saturdays, as I wait for the mailman to drop Lancaster Farming into our mailbox. I greatly appreciate the various recipes of mine that you have published. I look forward to my favorite section of the paper every week.

This recipe is a great brunch dish for a family get-together.

HASH BROWN CASSEROLE

2 cans condensed cream of chicken soup
1 cup sour cream
½ teaspoon onion salt
2 pounds frozen hash brown potatoes
2 cups shredded Cheddar cheese

In a large bowl, combine soup, sour cream, and onion salt. Add potatoes and Cheddar cheese, mix well. Pour into greased 13x9x2-inch baking dish. Bake uncovered at 350 degrees for 55-60 minutes or until potatoes are tender. Top with Parmesan cheese. Makes 12-16 servings.

My husband and I own and operate a 96-acre dairy farm in Snyder County. We have four married children and seven grandchildren who love to visit the dairy farm.

This casserole is great for a church meal or a picnic lunch.

BANANA SPLIT DESSERT

5 cups graham cracker crumbs
⅔ cup butter, melted
2-3 bananas
½ gallon Neapolitan ice cream
1 cup chopped walnuts
1 cup chocolate chips
½ cup butter
2 cups powdered sugar
1½ cups whole milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 pint whipping cream

Prepare crust from crumbs and ⅔ cup butter; reserve one cup crumbs. Press remaining crumb mixture into bottom of 11x15-inch baking pan. Slice bananas crosswise and layer over crust. Cut ice cream in ½-inch thick slices and place over bananas. Sprinkle ice cream with nuts. Freeze until firm. Melt chocolate chips and ½ cup butter. Add powdered sugar and milk. Cook mixture until thick and smooth, stirring constantly.

Remove from heat; add vanilla. Cool chocolate mixture; pour over ice cream. Freeze until firm. Whip cream until stiff. Spread over chocolate layer. Top with reserved crumbs. Store in freezer. Remove 10 minutes before serving. Yields 25 servings. Half of the recipe will fill a 9x13-inch pan. Will keep for several weeks in the freezer.

I enjoy June Dairy Month and even more so trying the new recipes. I live on a farm with my parents, three brothers, and four sisters. We also have a woodworking shop as a sideline.

Pennsylvania Dairy Princess Rebecca Mowrer, right, and State Alternate Amy Moyer draw winning entries in Lancaster Farming's annual Dairy Recipe Drawing celebrating June Dairy Month. Thirty winners will receive their prizes within the next two weeks.

30 Win In Dairy Recipe Drawing

This week is the final edition of the five issues devoted to printing the best-ever dairy recipes submitted by our readers for Lancaster Farming's annual Dairy Recipe Drawing celebrating June Dairy Month.

Announcing the names of the 30 winners selected through a drawing evokes bittersweet emotions: Happiness for the 30 winners, but sadness that not everyone can receive a prize.

There are so many wonderful entries that it would be formidable to choose from simply reading the recipe — and we do not have the facilities to prepare the recipes — so we take the easy way out and pull the winning names from the scrambled entries.

This means that possibly the best recipe from your perspective did not receive a prize. For those who did not receive a prize, take solace that your entry is certain to become a favorite of some of our readers. In their eyes, and ours — your entry is a winner. Again and again, we hear from readers who report that they clip every recipe from this annual event and try them throughout the year.

Well Preserved

The Well Preserved news column is prepared by Lancaster County Cooperative Extension. It includes food preservation information and questions.

Blueberries

Blueberries are beginning to appear in the market and food preservers will soon be thinking of ways to capture the colorful sweetness of this little berry for later use. This is one of the easier fruits to freeze, but may also be canned, made into jam, jelly, preserves, or syrups. Even pies, cakes and muffins made with blueberries can be frozen.

Wild blueberries have been a cherished part of our heritage since the nation's earliest years. As one of a few native fruits, early settlers cherished the tiny berries as a basic ingredient in food and medicines. They incorporated blueberries into their diets by eating them fresh, adding them to stews and soups, and many other foods.

It wasn't until the 1930's that the cultivated blueberry business began to come alive. Today, North American blueberries account for 95 percent of the world's harvest.

Pennsylvania blueberries are most abundant during the month of July although some varieties mature later. Popular varieties include Earliblue, Bluetta, Blueray, Bluecrop, Berkeley, and Lateblue. All these varieties are excellent for eating fresh or for freezing and cooking.

When shopping, choose berries that appear plump and firm with a light silvery bloom. Select fully ripe fruit since unripe berries do not become sweeter after they are picked. Ripe blueberries have a light blue to blue-black color. Red or green berries have a sour flavor. Keep in mind that the bigger the berry, the sweeter it will be. Of course, for some palates, that doesn't mean the flavor is necessarily better. Part of the appeal of any berry is its tartness.

Blueberries are delicate. When you get them home, examine berries carefully and remove squashed, diseased or moldy berries. Refrain from washing blueberries until you are ready to use them; otherwise they will spoil quickly if they are refrigerated. Freezing washed berries results in a tougher skinned product. The National Center of Home Food Preservation recommends that blueberries be frozen without washing and then be washed before being used. This may result in them becoming mushy.

Another option is to wash them before freezing and laying them out on a towel to dry thoroughly before freezing. If you want to freeze them for later use spread dry (washed or unwashed) berries on a flat tray and place in the freezer. Once hard, transfer to any closed container. Do not thaw when you are ready to use them. Blueberries may also be frozen crushed or pureed. Crush or press washed berries through a fine sieve, or puree in a blender or food processor. Mix 1 to 1⅛ cups of sugar with each quart (2 pounds) of crushed berries or puree. Stir until sugar is dissolved. Pack into containers, leaving head space.

Blueberries may be canned using a light or medium sugar syrup or may be covered with water, apple or white grape juice.

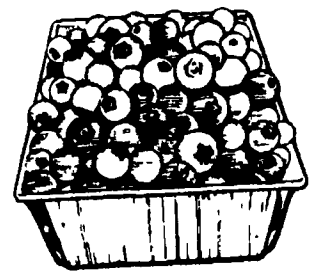
To make a light syrup for a canner load of quarts, mix 2¼ cups sugar in 9 cups water and heat to dissolve or mix and dissolve 3¾ cups sugar in 8¼ cups water to make a medium syrup.

To hot pack, place drained berries in boiling syrup, juice, or water and boil 30 seconds. Fill clean jars with hot berries and cooking liquid, leaving ½ inch headspace.

To raw pack, place drained berries in jars and cover with your choice of boiling water, juice, or syrup, leaving ½ inch headspace. With either method, process jars in a boiling water canner. Fill canner halfway with water and preheat to 180 degrees F for hot packs or 140 degrees F for raw packs. Load sealed jars into canner rack. Add water, if needed, to a level of one inch above jars. Cover.

When water boils vigorously, lower heat to maintain a gentle boil and process 15 minutes for hot packed pints or quarts and raw packed pints. Raw packed quarts should be processed 20 minutes. Altitudes above 1000 feet require additional processing time.

Here's a recipe that's sure to become a favorite on pancakes, waffles, or on top of ice cream. Make some for yourself and make some more to give as gifts.



BLUEBERRY SYRUP

2 quarts blueberries
6 cups water, divided
1 tablespoon grated lemon peel
3 cups sugar
2 tablespoons lemon juice

Crush blueberries. Combine blueberries, 2 cups water and lemon peel in a medium saucepot. Simmer 5 minutes. Strain through a damp jelly bag or several layers of cheesecloth. Combine sugar and 4 cups water in a medium saucepot; boil to 260 degrees F (adjust for altitude).

Add blueberry juice to sugar syrup. Boil 1 minute. Stir in lemon juice. Ladle hot syrup into hot jars, leaving ¼-inch headspace. Adjust two-piece caps. Process 10 minutes in a boiling water canner. Yield: about 3 pints. Source: Ball Blue Book

VERY GOOD YOGURT

Put 2 quarts milk into crockpot. Stir in ½ cup powdered milk and 1 tablespoon plain gelatin. Use egg beater to mix thoroughly.

Heat mixture to 160 degrees or boiling point. Turn off heat and cool until lukewarm.

Add ⅓ cup plain Dannon yogurt or some that you have made before. Add ¼ teaspoon sea salt and 2 tablespoons vanilla. I am diabetic so I do not add sugar, but you may if desired by adding any flavor Jell-O or fruit.

Pour mixture into small glass jars and let set on kitchen counter top for six hours before refrigerating.

I like to eat this with banana or fruit or even ice cream. I used to think that making yogurt would be very complicated, but I found out, it can be made easily. Enjoy eating your yogurt. Some people do not care for yogurt, I did not eat yogurt for many years, but now enjoy it.

Since we are semi-retired from the farm, we keep a goat for our own use. I really prefer to make this recipe with goat's milk. In raising our large family, we twice had to put the baby on goat's milk for various reasons. If goat milk is handled properly and cooled quickly, no one can find fault with it.

One of our sons is in the process of starting a goat dairy. He is building the milking parlor and will soon be ready to ship milk.

8 ounces Velveeta cheese, cubed
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese
½ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon dry mustard
2 cups grated Cheddar cheese

Cook macaroni in salted, boiling water according to package directions. Drain and rinse with cold water. Pour into 2½-quart baking dish.

In a saucepan, melt butter and stir in flour. Gradually stir in milk and sour cream. Add Velveeta cheese, Parmesan cheese, pepper, and mustard. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until sauce bubbles and thickens.

Toss cooked macaroni with Cheddar cheese. Pour sauce over macaroni and mix thoroughly. Bake at 350 degrees for one hour, or until bubbly and brown.

My husband, Ed, and I have four children: Joel, 16; Janet, 15; Joanne, 12; and Jeffrey, 9. We live on a five-acre farmette. My husband enjoys having two steers as a hobby. I enjoy browsing through the recipes in the B section of Lancaster Farming each week and the dairy contest recipes in June.

Kids 'Mix It With Milk' At Philadelphia Charge Game

PHILADELPHIA — Approximately 400 kids got the chance to play with their food at a special "Mix It With Milk" pre-game promotion at the June 8 Philadelphia Charge women's soccer game.

With a cup of milk and a spoon in hand, the kids added a variety of mix-ins — from flavored syrups to powdered drink mixes — to create their own cool milk flavors. Caramel- and kiwi-flavored syrups were a hit, as were the traditional chocolate and strawberry syrups. Kids also had a chance to try Apple Pie In A Glass Milk, a smoothie-like beverage featuring Mott's® applesauce.

Sponsored locally by the Mid-Atlantic Dairy Association, the "Mix It With Milk" promotion is part of a national effort to encourage kids to drink milk more often. Kids today are in a calcium crisis and often fail to meet daily calcium recommendations (800 milligrams for ages 4-8; 1,300 milligrams for pre-teens and teens).

"Milk makes it easy for kids to get the bone-building calcium and other nutrients their growing bodies needs," said Althea Zanecosky, a registered dietitian with Mid-Atlantic Dairy Association. "Drinking at least three glasses of milk a day helps build and maintain strong bones."

While highlighting the need for calcium, the "Mix It With Milk" pre-game promotion with the Philadelphia Charge showed kids that milk can be a fun beverage to drink. This was evident as a steady stream of kids mixed up their own flavors, consuming nearly 16 gallons of milk in the process.

As part of the national "Mix It With Milk" program, kids ages 6-12 can enter the Mix It With Milk and Mott's® Contest to create their own milk drink recipe using Motts® Applesauce or Fruitsations®, and other ingredients. For complete contest details, log on to the Kid's Club section of www.whymilk.com.

Kids line up to add their choice of milk mix-in ingredients at a "Mix It With Milk" promotion sponsored by the Mid-Atlantic Dairy Association.

Flavored syrups are a hit because kids can create their own milk flavors.

Cool Off This Summer With Refreshing 'Milk Chillers,' Frozen Treats

PHILADELPHIA — Moms, are you and the kids looking for refreshing, fun and fruity ways to cool off this summer? What better way than to have a Hawaiian luau right in your own kitchen featuring some fabulously festive drinks made with milk.

Kids will enjoy the cool taste of these "milk chillers," while moms will appreciate that each recipe serves as a good source of calcium and other essential nutrients their kids need. Plus, the recipes give moms a fun and creative way to encourage their kids to drink milk.

"Milk makes it easy for kids to get the bone-building calcium and other nutrients their growing bodies need," said Deanna Rose, a registered dietitian with the Mid-Atlantic Dairy Association. "Drinking at least three glasses of milk a day helps build and maintain strong bones."

Start your party by serving calcium-rich Kiddie Coconut Milk Chiller, which blends pineapples and sherbet with coconut extract and fat free milk. Then keep the kids cruisin' through their calcium quota with a Lip-Lickin' Limeade Milk Chiller featuring refreshing lime sherbet.

For the chocoholics among you, whip up a nutritious drink with the Chocoberry Milk Chiller, made with chocolate milk and chocolate and raspberry syrups. Another chocolate alternative is the lowfat Choco-nana Milk Blast, which blends the delicious taste of chocolate frozen yogurt and bananas.

Another way to cool off the crew this summer is to serve some dairy-rich frozen treats. Milksicles are an easy way to get in those calcium requirements while beating the heat. Chocolate Peanut Butter Milksicle, with its blend of chocolate milk and creamy peanut butter, is sure to hit the spot. Or you may want to kick back with a Creamy Carmelicious Milksicle featuring swirls of caramel ice cream topping.

For more recipe ideas, visit the Mid-Atlantic Dairy Association's Website, www.dairyspot.com, and click on Dairy Lover's Kitchen.

Creamy Carmelicious Milksicles

Creamy Carmelicious Milksicles

- 2 tablespoons cornstarch
- 1½ teaspoons vanilla
- ⅓ cup caramel ice cream topping at room temperature
- 6 (3 ounce) plastic or paper cups or 6 (2.5 ounce) freezer pop molds

2. Remove from heat; stir in vanilla. Transfer to a large shallow bowl; place in refrigerator for about 40 minutes, stirring occasionally.

3. Drop heaping teaspoonfuls of caramel topping randomly over pudding. Gently swirl into pudding. Spoon mixture into plastic cups; place cups in an 8-inch baking pan or pie pan. Place popsicle sticks in centers. Freeze until firm.

Watermelon

Easy-to-serve watermelon has been around for a long time but it's still as up-to-date as any convenience food you'll find in a modern market.

Watermelon culture goes back to prehistoric times. There are pictures or drawings by the ancient Egyptians that show they raised watermelons.

For centuries it was believed that watermelons came from Asia, but no evidence has been found that they ever grew wild.

About 100 years ago, the great missionary-explorer, David Livingstone, settled the question of origin when he found large tracts in Central Africa literally covered with watermelons growing wild.

Watermelons were introduced into this country by the early settlers. Over the years there have been considerable changes in varieties. For example, of the 20 or so popular varieties grown for the market as late as 1950, only two or three are still considered important. Newer varieties that are more resistant to disease, ship better and taste better are being developed for today's market.

The leading types of watermelon are the round, dark green or the long, light green and the long, light and dark green-striped variety. Popular seeded varieties grown in Southeast Pennsylvania include: Sugar Baby, Crimson Sweet, Sangria, and New Queen. There are also two yellow-fleshed varieties called Yellow Baby and Golden Crown. Seedless varieties such as Millionaire, Honey Heart and Sweetheart hybrid are also very popular.

To select a ripe, juicy melon look for one that's symmetrical in shape, fresh and attractive in appearance and of good color for the variety. A melon that has a pointed end generally isn't mature and won't be very sweet tasting. A mature melon has bloom over the surface of the rind, giving it a velvety appearance, but too often the bloom gets rubbed off in handling and moving. A fully ripe watermelon has a thin outer skin that peels easily when scraped with the fingernail. But, it's not a good practice to go around leaving unsightly scratch marks on melons you don't decide to buy.

Another good guide to choosing a ripe, juicy melon is to look at the underside or belly of the melon that laid on the ground. This ground color changes from white to creamy white or yellow tinge with maturity.

Some people thump or slap a watermelon. Generally, this is too vague a test to be used by an amateur. The thump test is often used at harvest time in the field by a skilled person who knows what sound to expect from a particular variety. If you want to try your skill, an immature melon gives a metallic ringing sound while a mature melon gives a more muffled or dead sound. The only trouble is that an overripe melon gives the same dull sound, so this method of testing has its limitations.

Selecting ripe, sweet tasting melons has been made considerably easier with the trend toward selling cut pieces. Choose a cut piece with a full red color across the surface.

Light color or streaks of white indicate immaturity. Seeds should be black or dark brown for full ripeness, not white. For best taste there should be no cracks or hollows.

Pa. Gardener Selects Picks 'Tidal Wave Cherry'

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Penn State Master Gardeners have chosen "Tidal Wave Cherry" as the Pennsylvania Gardener Selects Plant of the Year for 2002.

This petunia was selected from among the 22 flowering annuals in the evaluation program as the best-performing plant in the 44 Gardener Selects gardens across Pennsylvania.

"The Master Gardener evaluators found this plant truly outstanding in both 2001, when it shared the plant of the year award with Angelonia 'Angel Mist Purple Stripe,' and this year when it stood out as the single most highly rated plant," said Robert Berghage, associate professor of horticulture. The plant of the year in 2000 was the petunia "Misty Lilac Wave."

Pennsylvania Gardener Selects is an educational and plant promotion program of the Horticulture Trial Gardens in the College of Agricultural Sciences. It is sponsored by the Master Gardener program, the Pennsylvania Floral Industry Association, the Pennsylvania Landscape and Nursery Association and the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture marketing program.

Gardener Select plants for 2002 are listed below. "Each of these plants grew and flowered well in the evaluation gardens and is an excellent choice for home gardens and commercial plantings across the commonwealth," said Berghage.

Annuals: Argyranthemum "Butterfly," French Marigold "Bonanza Bolero," Ornamental Pepper "Super Chili," Petunia "Purple Wave," Petunia "Pink Wave," Petunia "Kahuna Violet," Rudbeckia "Indian Summer," farinacea Signum Verbena "Aztec Dark Lavender," Verbena "Tapien Blue Violet" and Zinnia "Profusion Orange."

Perennials: Echinacea purpurea "Magnus," Perovskia atriplicifolia "Russian sage." and Rudbeckia fulgida "Goldsturm."

Dairy Recipe Entries Wrap Up June Dairy Month

Stir all in a crockpot and cook on high for three hours. Beat eggs and vanilla and add a little hot milk mix from the crockpot. Stir back into the rest of tapioca. Cook approximately 15 minutes longer. Remove to other bowl and chill. Add whipped cream or fruit of choice.

We live on a dairy farm in Lancaster County. We milk approximately 61 cows and farm 220 acres along with our seven children. I'm looking forward to seeing all the dairy recipes again. It's a yearly highlight. Thanks to whoever has a part in getting this together!

1 quart mashed potatoes
10 cups (or more) bread cubes
1 cup hot water

Cook celery, onion, and butter together for 15 minutes. Pour celery mixture over bread cubes and mix. Add rest of ingredients, mixing well. Be sure it is very moist. Add more milk if necessary. Bake at 350 degrees for 45 minutes or until heated thoroughly. It can be frozen.

CREAMY VANILLA PUDDING

9 cups milk, scalded
1¼ cups sugar
¼ cup cornstarch
1¼ teaspoons salt
3 tablespoons butter
3 teaspoons vanilla
5 eggs
1¼ cups milk
Optional:
Sliced bananas
Whipped cream
Topping:
2 cups crushed graham crackers
½ cup crunchy peanut butter

Beat eggs and 1¼ cups cold milk with the dry ingredients. Pour into hot milk and stir until it thickens. Add vanilla and butter. Delicious warm or cold. Top with sliced bananas, whipped cream and graham crackers mixed with peanut butter.

Variation:
Instead of adding vanilla I like to use 2 tablespoons instant coffee for coffee pudding or ½ cup cocoa powder for chocolate pudding

This recipe is a favorite of ours as we are fond of anything made with dairy products. Our meals are not complete without a pitcher full of cold milk on the table! We are dairy farmers in Franklin County. I enjoy cooking for our growing family and always like to watch for new recipes to try in the June issues of Lancaster Farming. Thanks for printing them!

BANANA SPLIT BROWNIE CAKE

1½ cups chopped pecans
1 cup flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
1¼ cups butter
6-ounces unsweetened chocolate, coarsely chopped
3 large bananas, divided
2¼ cups sugar, divided
6 eggs, room temperature
1½ teaspoons vanilla
1¼ cups semisweet chocolate chips
1 quart heavy cream

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Spread pecans on tray and bake 3 minutes. Cool. Grease and flour three 9-inch round cake pans. Set aside.

Combine flour, baking powder, and salt. In a saucepan, melt butter, and unsweetened chocolate. Remove from heat. Mash one banana to equal ½ cup. Set aside. With mixer, beat eggs, 2 cups sugar, and vanilla until thickened (3-4 minutes). Reduce speed and beat in chocolate mixture and banana. Beat in flour mixture. Stir in chocolate chips. Divide between pans. Bake 20 minutes or until cake springs back. Run knife around edges to loosen. Cool 20 minutes on rack, then remove from pan. Continue to cool cake on rack.

Beat cream with remaining sugar until soft peaks form. Slice remaining banana diagonally. Place one layer on plate. Spread with 1½ cups whipped cream and half of banana and ¼ cups pecans. Repeat this layer. Add third layer. Cover top and sides with remaining whipped cream. Press remaining pecans around the sides of the cake. Chill before serving. 16 servings.

This cake may take time to make, but the results are well worth it. I made this recipe for our Easter dinner this year.

We live on a dairy farm in Bradford County. We have three daughters who are married and live away from home. Our daughter Eileen was an state alternate dairy princess, and we traveled the state to meet many wonderful people. In fact, she is very close to the other alternate princess who served at that time.

I teach consumer and family science at school as well as help with the calves at home. I do enjoy the foods part of the paper.

Century Of 4-H Fashions Set For Display On OSU Campus

COLUMBUS, Ohio — A short-sleeved, monogrammed dress made in 1922. A pin cushion, stuffed with hair, made in 1947. A patchwork denim jacket made in the 1960s. These are just a few of the items made by 4-H'ers over the years that will be on display July 10-Sept. 7 in "A Century of Style, 100 Years of 4-H Fashion."

Announcement of the exhibit, made earlier this year and designed to help celebrate 4-H's centennial year, hit a note with 4-H alumni, said Joyce Smith, one of the organizers and clothing specialist for Ohio State University Extension.

"We probably heard from over 300 people from all over Ohio, and even from Indiana and Iowa," Smith said. "Some of them have kept their 4-H sewing projects from the 1920s — that's 80 years they've held onto them. That shows the importance they put on their projects and their years in 4-H."

The exhibit will shown in the Gladys Keller Snowden Galleries located in the Geraldine Schottenstein wing of Campbell Hall, 1787 Neil Ave. on the Ohio State campus. It will be open to the public Wednesday through Saturday from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Group tours are possible by contacting curator Gayle Strege at (614) 292-3090.

"We accepted virtually everything offered from the 1920s through 1950," Smith said. "But we got so many offers of garments and other projects from after 1950, that we really had some tough decisions to make." Smith, Strege, and Extension associates Mary Forster and Bridgette Sloan reviewed all of the submissions to select what would end up in the exhibit.

"We wanted things that would be a good representation of 4-H projects from that time period and of fashion in that decade," Smith said. Many potential donors had stories to go along with their submissions, she said.

"One submission, from someone who's now a county Extension agent, made a very colorful, neck-to-floor caftan in her loungewear project in the 1960s. It won a blue ribbon, but she couldn't model it in the style review that year because judges looked at it as 'private wear' and didn't see it as proper to model in public."

The oldest garment in the exhibit will be a short-sleeved dress made in 1922. The 4-H'er monogrammed her initials on the dress. One other dress from the 1920s will be part of the display, as well as a collection of tea towels — a standard beginning 4-H sewing project that called for hand-stitching, Smith said.

Three of the submissions were made by male 4-H members, Smith said. The earliest is from 1974, in which a young 4-H'er made a suit, complete with a polka-dot blue and white shirt. (Unfortunately, the shirt is missing, Smith said.) The other two are both from the 1990s.

The Jackie Kennedy look was popular with 4-H sewers in the 1960s, as were shift dresses with matching kerchief-type scarves. Wide bell-bottomed pants and bicentennial-related clothing were popular submissions from the 1970s. In the 1980s, quilted vests and "Gunne Sax"-type dresses were standards. In the 1990s, more outer wear and active sportswear were being made, probably because those types of fabrics and notions became available to home sewers then, Smith said.

One family submitted items made by three generations of 4-H'ers — grandmother, mother and daughter — Smith said. "The grandmother sent in an olive-green dress with hand-stitched crewel work that she made in 1939 on her mother's treadle sewing machine," Smith said. Some of the submissions came complete with the ribbons won at county and state fairs. Some had their original entry tags still attached.

"What's been best about this project is the obvious warmth and good feelings these alumni have about their years in 4-H," Smith said. "Some people still had everything they ever made in 4-H. I think it says a lot about the program and the people."

Ohio 4-H is marking its 100th birthday throughout the year, including a "Weekend of Celebration" scheduled for Sept. 6-7 on the Columbus campus.

½ teaspoon salt
1 cup grated cheddar cheese

Mix cheese into the milk. Add the dry ingredients. Melt ½ cup butter into a jelly-roll pan or a cookie sheet with sides. Roll out dough into a large rectangle shape, ½-inch thick and cut into strips 1x3 inches. Roll strips into butter and place on the same pan until full.

You can sprinkle seasonings (oregano, garlic, onion, salt or dry ranch dressing mix) on top if desired.

CARAMEL PUDDING

4 tablespoons butter
1 cup water
6 cups milk
8 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons vanilla

Melt butter and sugar in a skillet. Do not get too brown, as it burns easily. Add water. When all is dissolved, add milk and salt. Mix flour with water or milk and add to boiling milk. Add vanilla.

For microwave, put butter, sugar, and water in microwave dish. Add 4 cups milk and heat. (Stir flour into remaining milk. I put the flour and 2 cups milk in blender to make a smooth paste). Add salt and vanilla. Add to hot mixture and stir. Microwave until thickened. Stir often.

I am a mother of eight children. Six of them are married and two are at home. This is our favorite and real easy dessert to make.

We live on a dairy farm and I often make this dessert in a microwave while eating breakfast.

YUMMY CUPCAKES

8-ounces cream cheese
1 egg
½ cup granulated sugar
Dash salt
12-ounces chocolate chips

Mix cake mix according to package directions. In another bowl, mix remaining five ingredients. (I use a cookie scoop, which is like a small ice cream scoop) and put 2 scoops of the cake mix in paper-lined cupcake tins and 1 scoop cream cheese. Bake at 350 degrees for 20-25 minutes. Makes about 30 cupcakes. Cream cheese mixture will be at the bottom. There is no need for icing.

This is an old family favorite. Very seldom do I make cupcakes using any other recipe. I don't make this one so often either so they are always a treat and never last long.

PEANUT BUTTER PIE

1 baked 9-inch pie crust
2 cups milk
3 tablespoons butter
½ cup sugar
2 eggs
2 tablespoons cornstarch
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla

Topping:
⅔ cup peanut butter
1½ cups confectioners' sugar
1 cup whipping cream

Put milk, butter, and sugar in a heavy saucepan and heat until almost boiling.

Beat together eggs, cornstarch, and salt, and add to milk, stirring all the time until thick. (I like to add a little of the hot milk to egg mixture before pouring into the milk. I also use a wire whisk as the pudding gets smoother). Add one teaspoon vanilla.

Mix peanut butter and confectioner's sugar together to make crumbs. Save two tablespoons crumbs to put on top of pie. Sprinkle the rest of the crumbs in the bottom of the pie crust and pour warm pudding on top. Let cool, then whip one cup whipping cream and put on top of pie. Sprinkle crumbs on top.

This pie is my husband and three sons' favorite pie. I used to work as a cook at a restaurant where I learned to make it.

Although we don't live on a farm my husband and I both grew up on a dairy farm and our sons, ages 5 and 3 years old and a one-year-old, love to go to the uncle's farm about a quarter mile down the road from us.

Beat egg whites until foamy; gradually beat in two tablespoons sugar, beating to soft peaks. Set aside.

Cook tapioca mixture over medium heat to a full boil, stirring constantly 6-8 minutes. Gradually add to beaten egg whites, stirring until just blended. Stir in vanilla. Serve warm or chilled.

This is quick and easy to make. Since we live on a dairy farm, there's always plenty of milk. We also have a few chickens to supply us with eggs.

I always look forward to June Dairy Month recipes.

We with you all a happy and healthy summer.

Mix all ingredients, folding in stiffly beaten egg whites last. Pour into two-quart buttered baking dish. Bake 45 minutes at 350 degrees.

This is one of my mom's recipes. She made it a lot when we were little. It is a good way to get carrots into that carrot hater.

We are living through a wet drought here in Bowers. The children helped plant he garden, something we all enjoy. Our horses have started foaling. What long legged bundles of pep they are! We are healthy and busy — wishing you the same.

We are a hay-farming family from the beautiful Finger Lakes are of New York.

John and I have two daughters, Linnell, 15, and Serita, 12. Last summer the girls enjoyed baling hay as our "relief crew."

They and the other bale crew members love these cookies, especially warm from the oven. One of my most important summer jobs is delivering lots of food to the tractor cabs!

This is a very cool, refreshing dessert for the upcoming hot weather. I just love the B section of the paper, especially the June Dairy issue.

I belong to a lunch group that meets once a month. For the menu I am to prepare this year I am going to use recipes that I have cut out from this issue over the years.

Ken Rexroth and his son, Jim, are true farmers. They milk about 130 cows (black and white of course), have beef cattle and grow corn, alfalfa, wheat, and soybeans. I am Ken's companion and also secretary/bookkeeper for Rexroth Farms. We are hoping Jim's children, Nicholas, 4, and Alexus, 2, become the fourth generation to farm these lands.

Let's hope for a good amount of rain this year.

THAT PUMPKIN STUFF

2 cups self-rising flour
2 cups sugar
1 cup butter
4 cups cooked pumpkin
4 cups milk
2 cups sugar
4 tablespoons self-rising flour
1 teaspoon cinnamon (or pumpkin pie spice)

Make fine crumbs with the flour, sugar, and butter, and press on bottom and sides of a 9x13-inch cake pan.

Blend the pumpkin, milk, sugar, flour, and cinnamon (or spice) until smooth (I usually divide it and blend half at a time).

Pour over crumbs and bake at 350 degrees for 40-50 minutes or until center is set.

Makes 20 large servings.

Our family of six children uses a lot of milk... good thing we are dairy farmers!

This recipe is a hybrid between a bar cookie crust and my grandmother's pumpkin pie. It uses milk and lots of pumpkin, and is quick to make.

VELVEETA CHEESE BALL

1⅓ pounds Velveeta cheese
16 ounces cream cheese
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
1 tablespoon minced onion
1 tablespoon parsley
1 teaspoon seasoned salt
1 tablespoon liquid smoke
½ cup bacon bites

Have cheese at room temperature so it is easier to mix. Mix all together and form into a ball. Serve with crackers, pretzels, carrot sticks, or spread on bread.

We really like this cheese ball and it's so easy to make. We live on a small farm and have veal calves and chickens. My husband also has a diesel shop that keeps him busy.

We have three girls and two boys. We are thankful that our children can all run and play.

Our family is unique, we speak English Dutch and have signs in our home since our two boys are hearing-impaired.

May we all do the work that God has chosen for us.

Incorporate Shabby Chic, Antiques, Primitives, Greenery, More Into Outdoor Settings

This pergola offers the perfect setting to incorporate shabby chic, antiques, and primitives to welcome guests and family. An ironstone pitcher holds an assortment of tiger lilies and a quilt is draped across a painted high back bench.

Don't be afraid to combine the new with the old as shown by these crisp chair covers placed in the pergola. Notice the leaded glass window hanging from the top of the structure, the weathered picket fence, foot stool, shot glasses, dolly-lined wicker tray, flower pot, and other touches.

SCHAEFFERSTOWN (Lebanon Co.) — Use the things you love. Don't relegate cherished pieces to the closet or display on sterile shelves.

Take them out to the garden. Place them on the porch, in the yard, by a shed, or in the summer kitchen if you're lucky enough to have one.

Cher Delancey knows the right spot to place pieces to add interest and color in unexpected places.

For instance, a patchwork quilt finds a new spot on a white painted bench inside the backyard pergola. A bouquet of tiger lilies and forsythia greenery lends a cheery spot to the weathered wood and moss-covered bricks.

Cher and her husband raised their family in the Washington D.C. and northern Virginia area. Although they loved the cultural experiences and said their children received an incredible education, Cher longed for a place in the countryside. Six years ago, they moved into the Schaefferstown house that had been lovingly restored by its former owners. Before that, the house had been vacated for decades and was known as a haunted house, Cher said.

The "haunted" designation intrigued Cher who said that as a young girl loved sneaking into abandoned houses. The mystery of the old houses and the furnishings fascinated her. Her dad and her aunt also honed her love for "old." She accompanied her father, a history buff, to state museums weekly.

Her aunt was an interior designer. Cher said, "I always wanted to grow up to be like my Aunt Janet. Each summer I spent a week at her house and often accompanied her to antique stores."

It was in on one of those visits that Cher purchased her first antique, a tiny porcelain doll.

She was hooked. The fascination with things from a former era soon encouraged her to frequent garage sales in search of unique finds.

After her marriage and move to the D.C. area, Cher often visited her mother in the Harrisburg area. While there, she visited garage sales where she picked up pieces to resell at flea markets in the D.C. area, which commanded higher prices.

Cher Delancey welcomes guests to her shop with this welcoming display.

Her dream was to someday own an antique shop. The Schaefferstown place was the ideal spot with its two-story shed and a detached summer kitchen. Cher describes her wares as leaning toward primitive "because I think they have more of a story to tell, and garden-related stuff. "Shabby chic keeps sneaking in," Cher said of her perchance for picking up pieces that she loves.

In her shop, cupboards filled with treasures for garden and home are displayed. Cher sees potential in an old wooden wheelchair as the perfect spot for a potted plant. A lightening rod, a bee skep, and a wooden snow shovel are some other pieces that are waiting to be claimed for someone searching for garden decor.

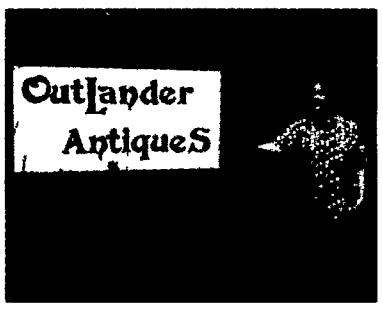
A Victorian's child desk, child's shovel and hoe, and small table and chair set appeal to the younger set.

Cher's shop also includes traditional antiques such as crocks and unique finds such as a youth bed that can be transformed into a full-sized bed.

Although her shop holds a trove of treasures, visitors also are encouraged to walk around the property to see the wares displayed in the summer kitchen, the porch, and the pergola.

Outlander Antiques, 309 E. Main St., Schaefferstown, is located on Route 897, a few blocks east of the Schaefferstown Square. It is open Monday, Thursday, and Friday, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and the first and third Sunday from noon to 4 p.m., and by appointment or chance. For more information, call (717) 949-2383.

A dove cote, measuring several feet in length and height, was popular among Early American gardens.



When Cher Delancey moved from the Washington D.C. area to Schaefferstown, she was warned that families who did not live in the area for 100 years were considered outsiders by Lebanon Countians. She named her shop Outlander Antiques, which means outsider in German. But Cher said that she has found countians to be friendly and welcoming. "It's every city person's dream to move to the country, but this is absolutely better than I ever dreamed," Cher said.

Antiques Questions And Answers

I have an old golf club putter that is marked with a lion on one side and a crown on the other. A neighbor gave it to me and he had found it at a Goodwill Store. Who could tell me the name of the maker, age and value?

C.S. - Broken Arrow, OK

Write details to author-golf dealer Morton Olman, c/o The Old Golf Shop, P.O. Box 220 Pleasant Plain, OH, 45162.

Enclosed a photo of my grandmother's tapestry. As you see it is dated 1880 and signed with her name. Is there any value?

M.J.M. - Staten Island, NY

Consider your grandmother's alphabet sampler a family heirloom. The fact that it is signed and dated 1880, adds to the value.

However if several colors were used along with designs and animal, flower or bird motifs, it would be worth more than its shop price of around $300.

My mother-in-law asked me to find out the value of this 12-inch high china vase with a picture of a standing woman in a long gown and cape.

G.F. - Waverly, IO

Your vase is "portrait ware" popular in the late 19th century. It was made by many European manufacturers and often unmarked when made before 1890. Value depends on whether it is a transfer print or hand painted. If the latter, look for an artist's signature.

Popular subjects included royalty. It could sell in a shop for $200 if a transfer print. Over $500 if hand painted.

I purchased a Dr. Thornton print, with the following printed on it: "Reinagle Siena ARA Ponxt, Night Blooming Cereus, London. Published by Dr. Thornton. Jan 1, 1812. It is in excellent condition though the brown paper backing is showing its age. I haven't examined it out of the frame.

Since I have willed it to dear friends I would like to tell them what they are to receive.

B.W.M.H. - Naples, FL

Your mentioning "brown paper backing showing" leads me to believe that your print was "laid down"; glued to a backing as was common in the late 19th, early 20th century. This lowers the value. However, it can be professionally removed, depending on the value of the print. Prices for Dr. Thornton's prints range from $2,200 to $14,000 in galleries, such as Kenyon-Oppenheimer, in Chicago (who also restore prints). Send a photo to them listing size, etc. at 410 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago, IL 60611.

My great-great-great-aunt had this china "piano baby." Can you tell me about it?

B.K. - Hollywood, FL

Piano babies were made in a variety of positions from crawling to playing with their toes and in sizes from three inches to 12 inches. They were popular in the late 19th century and were made of bisque, and in Germany.

Yours could sell in a shop for around $500.

I found an old, pine serving table in the basement of an old house we bought and are restoring. From my research it appears to be late 19th century. It has heavy

P.C.- Lancaster, PA

If you can use it by all means refinish it. Similar tables in good condition sell at auction for $400-$500.

My late mother moved from Chicago in the 1960s to Atlanta. One of her favorite hats, that I discovered among her things, is a very ornate cocktail hat. The label reads, "Bes Ben, Chicago." Is it a curiosity or of value?

T.M. D. - Atlanta, GA

Bes Ben hats were custom-made and sell at vintage clothing auctions for over $500.

I paid $15 at a farm auction for a pair of elm fire bellows. They are marked with the maker's initials and dated 1875. Did I find a bargain?

S.L. - Lancaster, PA

In working order they could sell in a shop for $200 or more.

Is there any value to old stereoscopic views? I found one that fascinated me at the flea market. It shows a Zepplin flying over a European town and is in good condition.

A.J. - Dallas, TX

Your stereoscopic view probably dates around 1914-18. It could sell in a shop for around $65.

I found my grandfather's old calling card case with some of his business cards still in them. It is some kind of metal, not silver and has line designs running vertically. He had carried it in the 1930s. Any idea of value?

L.K. - Chicago, IL

From your description it could have been one of the silver plate card cases mass produced, and sold by Sears Roebuck. Similar examples can sell in shops for around $50 to $75.

Enclosed a picture of a Santa figure, metal still bank my husband picked up at a flea market. Can you tell me age, value?

L.E.T. - Cincinnati, OH

Your photo appears to be a cast iron, late 19th century, American, still bank.

If not a reproduction could sell in a shop for as much as $2,000. But, if it is 20th century, and white metal the value could be around $50.

¼ cup shredded Parmesan cheese
2 tablespoons lemon juice

Cook linguine according to package directions. Meanwhile, in a skillet over low heat, melt butter. Stir in flour, salt, and pepper until smooth.

Gradually stir in milk. Bring to a boil and stir two minutes or until thickened. Remove from heat.

Combine cheese, toss with lemon juice. Add to the sauce, stir until cheese begins to melt.

Drain linguine; add the cheese sauce and toss to coat. Enjoy!

This is a very good recipe. It's just enough for two people, but I double it for my family of five.

We live on a farm, but we just sold our milk cows a year ago. We are now raising replacement heifers. I think my husband and I and our children needed a break after 20 years.

Some day my husband and I would like to go back into milking but God only knows. So we are enjoying a little together time with each other. I hope you folks enjoy this recipe!

This is a dish our whole family likes and it uses a lot of dairy products.

My husband, James, and I live on a dairy farm with our four children, Jennifer, 7; Michael, 6; Amanda, 4; and Roeland, 2. Dairy products are often used in a lot of our meals. Our youngest son is not satisfied unless he has as glass of milk with every meal!

Living on a farm is a great place to raise a family.

Fourth Of July Initiative Promotes Pork Ribs As Cookout Choice

DES MOINES, Iowa — As Americans gear up to celebrate life, liberty and the pursuit of outdoor fun for the Fourth of July holiday, the National Pork Checkoff's Pork Information Bureau (PIB) is promoting all-American pork ribs as a celebration of delicious independence from everyday grilled meals.

The Checkoff-funded PIB this year is showing consumers about the versatility of pork ribs and highlighting ribs as the natural summer cookout choice for the Fourth of July. A print and radio initiative that focuses on ribs prepared with an ethnic twist is being conducted as part of this consumer effort.

The effort includes distribution of a media kit to newspaper food editors nationwide encouraging them to write stories about the versatility of barbecued pork ribs. Also the kit includes three new recipes featuring sauces with multi-cultural influences.

To reach more Americans with messages about ribs, representatives from the PIB's spokesperson network will conduct "DJ Drops" at radio stations in 13 key markets in the weeks leading up to the Fourth of July.

Jill Appell, a pork producer from Altoona, Ill., and a member of the Pork Checkoff Demand Enhancement Committee, said, "The DJ Drops will be a fun and effective means of using public relations to highlight pork ribs as the natural choice for Fourth of July celebrations. It also will demonstrate that pork ribs are ideal to grill all summer."

DJ Drops are visits to targeted high-listenership radio stations by trained spokespeople during heavy-talk time periods, such as the morning commute.

To make the visits fun and attention-getting, the spokespeople will deliver all the fixings for an outdoor barbecue to DJs, including the most important menu item — a mouth-watering sampling of "Latin Pork Back Ribs with Smoky Pineapple-Mango Sauce."

The goal is to inspire impromptu on-air discussion about pork and ultimately to drive consumer traffic to pork in the supermarket meat case and to the Checkoff-funded Web site, porkboard.org.

Chesapeake Bay Group Seeks Nominations For Leadership Award

BALTIMORE, Md. — The Alliance for the Chesapeake Bay is seeking nominations for its annual Frances H. Flanigan Environmental Leadership Award. Nominees should be individuals who have demonstrated long-time commitment to fostering partnerships to improve the quality of the Chesapeake Bay watershed and whose work has had a meaningful and lasting impact on those efforts.

The Alliance for the Chesapeake Bay was founded in 1971 as the grassroots Citizens Program for the Chesapeake Bay to facilitate greater cooperation among local, state and federal governments and the general public to protect and restore the Bay and its rivers. For the past three decades, the Alliance has been the only regional non-profit organization exclusively focused on developing partnerships to protect and restore Bay watershed by building consensus among government, business, academic and non-profit organizations.

The Alliance's annual leadership award calls attention to the work of its first Executive Director Frances Flanigan who led the organization for 23 years. Fran retired from the Alliance in June 2001 but continues to work as an independent consultant for the betterment of the environment.

Nomination forms are available by contacting the Alliance at (410) 377-6270 or online at www.AllianceChesBay.org and must be postmarked by July 15 to be eligible for the award.

A lesson well learned...

CREAMY CHICKEN AND RICE CASSEROLE

4 cups instant rice
4 cups water
2 chicken bouillon cubes
½ cup butter, divided
2 cups milk
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon garlic powder
¼ teaspoon pepper
4 or 5 cups cooked chicken, cut into bite-sized pieces
12 ounces American cheese
1½ cups saltine crackers, crushed

Dissolve the bouillon cubes in the water and bring to a full rolling boil. Add instant rice and set aside for five minutes. In a saucepan melt ¼ cup of butter. Stir in flour until smooth. Add milk and seasonings. Bring to a boil, stirring constantly until thick. Reduce heat and stir in chicken, sour cream and American cheese until cheese is melted.

Spread rice in a greased 10x13-inch pan. Pour cheese sauce over rice. Top with crackers mixed with remaining melted butter.

Bake at 425 degrees for 10-15 minutes.

Our family enjoyed our first taste of this Creamy Chicken and Rice Casserole when we were visiting my husband's brother's family for the first time in their new home. Our two children cleaned their plates and asked for second helping! I knew I had to get the recipe and share it with others.

My husband, Jim, is a partner with his father and oldest brother on their dairy farm in the heart of Raystown country in central Pennsylvania. They farm about 450 acres and milk about 120 Holstein cows. Jim is always whistling or singing despite his heavy workload. He is a volunteer firefighter/EMT and serves as deputy chief for our local volunteer fire company. He's a great dad an always seems to find time for his family.

We have two children who enjoy life on the farm and are getting to be a big help with everyday chores. Emily is 11 and Matthew is 9. They both help milk in our new flat parlor and know how to feed the calves. Homework, chores, friends, 4-H club and other activities keep them very busy.

I was recently hired as a second grade teacher at the elementary school our children attend. It was a big adjustment learning to manage full-time teaching with being a mother and farmer's wife. I especially enjoy summers off to cook, garden, and can the good things that grow. We always eat well! I also enjoy reading, swimming, playing the piano and going for walks. When Lancaster Farming arrives, I grab the "B" section and look for Joyce Bupp's article first and then search out the recipe section for something new to try. Thanks for the great ideas! Keep them coming! I'll be looking for the dairy recipes in June.

This recipe is loaded with calcium-rich dairy products and has a rich, creamy texture. It is easy to prepare, nutritious and fills up hungry bellies. We hope your family enjoys it as much as ours does.

CROCK POT TAPIOCA

1 cup sugar
1 cup small pearl tapioca
4 beaten eggs
2 teaspoons vanilla

Mix together and put in a 2½ quart crockpot. Cook on high for three hours. The last hour watch closely as it tends to boil over. Add eggs and vanilla. Cook 20 minutes longer. Serve chilled with whipped topping and fresh fruit.

This is one of my favorite tapioca pudding recipes. It is so easy to prepare, especially if you are busy an don't have much time to prepare a special dessert. I enjoy the cooking section of Lancaster Farming and I'm always looking for new ways to prepare different dishes. Keep up the good work!

CHEESEBURGER SOUP

½ pound ground beef
¾ cup chopped onion
¾ cup shredded carrots
¾ cup diced celery
1 teaspoon dried basil
1 teaspoon dried parsley flakes
4 tablespoons butter, divided
3 cups chicken broth
4 cups diced peeled potatoes
¼ cup all-purpose flour
2 cups processed American cheese, cubed
1½ cups milk
¾ teaspoon salt
¼ to ½ teaspoon pepper
¼ cup sour cream

In a three-quart saucepan, brown beef, drain, and set aside. In the same saucepan, saute onion, carrots, celery, basil and parsley in one tablespoon butter until vegetables are tender; about 10 minutes. Add broth, potatoes and beef, bring to a boil. Reduce heat; cover and simmer 10 to 12 minutes or until potatoes are tender.

Meanwhile in a small skillet, melt remaining butter. Add flour; cook and stir three to five minutes or until bubbly. Add to soup; bring to a boil. Cook and stir two minutes.

Reduce heat to low. Add cheese, milk, salt and pepper. Cook and stir until cheese melts. Remove from heat; blend in sour cream. Yields: eight servings or about two quarts.

I look forward to this contest each June. It's nice to read about the person behind the recipe and to try new and different recipes. I love to collect anything with cows and have a nice collection. My favorite pieces are the Mary Moos figurines.

½ cup butter, softened
salt and pepper to taste
¼ cup chopped onion

Mix all ingredients except potatoes until blended. Add potatoes last. Pour into ungreased 13x9-inch pan and bake at 350 degrees one hour.

BRUNCH CASSEROLE

1 pound bulk sausage, ham cubes, or bacon, cooked and drained
8-ounce can refrigerated crescent dinner rolls
2 cups shredded mozzarella cheese
5-6 beaten eggs
¾ cup milk

Use a 9x13-inch pan with the dinner rolls — press perforations to seal. Sprinkle with meat and cheese. Beat the eggs and milk and pour over top, covering all the pan.

Bake at 450 degrees 20 minutes or until set. Let stand five minutes.

This is a very quick and easy meal that we often eat for supper if we have had a long night in the barn.

My husband Darryl and I milk 45 registered Jerseys, feed 50 youngstock and steers, a handful of chickens, and one goat to eat weeds. We farm 65 tillable acres belonging to Darryl's folks, and manage about 20 acres of pasture. We have three healthy children: Abigail is almost six, Albert is 16 months old, and Adrianna Emily is two months old. Abby and Adrianna go to the barn most every evening; Albert sleeps over chores.

We really enjoy farming and the opportunity to raise our children in this environment. The money and hours are lousy, but the positives are so much greater than the negatives.

CINDY'S JELL-O SALAD

2 boxes lime gelatin (regular or sugar free) cold, hot water per instructions
1 small-to-medium can pears
8 ounces cream cheese

In a blender, add gelatin and water. Drain can pears and add to gelatin. Blender all together well, put into a covered bowl, and refrigerate.

This is an easy recipe I make frequently. A lady from my home church would make this for youth group and everyone loved it. Here is my version of how I think she made it.

I also make it fat free and sugar free for the dinners that I need a Jell-O salad.

For a change I'll use different gelatines and fruits for any creamy-tasting variety.

DuPont To Launch Soybeans Into Space

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — In the first space experiment of its kind, DuPont (NYSE: DD) will begin space exploration designed to discover new scientific research about one of the most consumed crops in the world today — soybeans.

Continuing its extensive history with NASA, DuPont has partnered with the Wisconsin Center for Space Automation and Robotics (WCSAR) — a NASA Commercial Space Center at the University of Wisconsin-Madison — to conduct an unprecedented exploration of soybean development by launching and growing soybean plants in space during NASA's space shuttle flight.

The research will determine whether plants grow differently in space and examine the effects of zero-gravity on plant growth and development. The soybeans-in-space launch is the first initiative to grow a complete soybean crop in space — from planting the seed to harvesting the grain.

DuPont subsidiary, Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc., and WCSAR will study the harvested seed from soybean plants grown in space to find out if they have improved oil, protein, carbohydrates or secondary metabolites that could benefit farmers and consumers.

According to the United Soybean Board, soybeans are the largest single source of protein meal and vegetable oil in the human diet. Domestically, soybeans provide 80 percent of the edible consumption of fats and oils in the U.S. In 2000, 54 percent of the world's soybean trade originated from the U.S. with soybean and product exports totaling more than $6.6 billion. The world's largest seed company, Pioneer, is the brand leader in soybeans with more than 100 product varieties on the market.

As part of the initiative, scientists will plant Pioneer-brand soybean seeds in a specialized tray within a growth chamber developed by WCSAR. The chamber will be delivered to the International Space Station (ISS) from the space shuttle flight. During the 70-day experiment, the soybean plants will germinate, grow, and produce seeds. Scientists will monitor the process via video and data sent from the space station.

The plants and harvested grain will be returned to Earth this summer by the Space Shuttle Atlantis. Seeds exhibiting unique and desirable qualities will be planted by Pioneer researchers to determine if the traits can be inherited in future generations. Pioneer will identify the genetics of those traits and use that information to further improve the soybeans' efficiency and profitability for farmers.

DuPont, which marks its 200th anniversary in July, has a long history of space initiatives, dating back to NASA's origination 33 years ago.

"For 200 years, innovation has been the cornerstone of DuPont," said Dr. Thomas M. Connelly, chief science and technology officer for DuPont. "As a science company, we realize that future opportunities don't always come where you found your last opportunities. The discovery process often requires exploring in new areas — like soybeans growing in space — to unleash the next wave of innovation."

"This is an incredible scientific opportunity for us and our partners," said Dr. Tom Corbin, DuPont researcher on the project. "Studying the effects of soybean plants grown in space will help us expand our knowledge of soybeans and facilitate continued improvement of soybean germplasm for farmers."

The joint initiative builds on Advanced Astroculture (TM) technologies developed by WCSAR that have proven successful in growing other plants in space. Astroculture (TM) controls the input of variables and conditions necessary for plant growth such as temperature, water, humidity, light, atmospheric conditions, and nutrients.

"This program also provides an exciting opportunity for students throughout the world to learn more about the future of basic plant growth through an educational outreach program called Space Explorers, Inc.," Corbin said.

Urbana Laboratories Inoculant Recognized For Improved Soybean Yield

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. — An inoculant exclusively licensed and marketed by Urbana Laboratories since 1994 has been recognized by the Agricultural Research Service (ARS), the chief scientific research agency of the USDA.

In May's Agricultural Research Magazine, the ARS credited Urbana Laboratories with being behind the success of the bacterium, now enjoying "celebrity status as a commercial soybean inoculant."

Urbana Laboratories has sold approximately 14 million acres worth of TA-11 Nod+, also called the USDA Patented Strain. It is estimated that the inoculants containing TA-11 Nod+ have raised soybean yields by nearly 30 million bushels since 1995, the first year of sales. At $5 per bushel, that's an additional $150 million in gross income for farmers.

The scientists who developed the strain of bacteria used to inoculate soybeans were recently honored as winners of the 2002 Federal Laboratory Consortium (FLC) Award for Excellence in Technology Transfer. Microbiologists L. David Kuykendall and William J. (Jim) Hunter derived TA-11 Nod+ through a nonrecombinant, or bacterial genetic, approach "so you don't have to worry about foreign genes in the bacterium's DNA," Kuykendall said.

"The new strain's impact has been strong enough to show that we improved on an old, sustainable process and that what's good for the environment can also make good economic sense," Kuykendall said.

In field trials, TA-11 Nod+ fixed 50 percent more nitrogen in the plant tissue, increased root nodulation 25 percent, and showed a positive response 70 percent of the time. This helps farmers reap higher yields, benefit rotated crops, and improve soil conditions, while saving on synthetic fertilizer in an environmentally safe manner.

Founded more than 50 years ago, Urbana Laboratories in St. Joseph, Mo. is a producer of Rhizobium inoculants for legumes such as soybeans and alfalfa. Urbana conducts an extensive, ongoing program of product research and development, is dedicated to the continuous improvement of strains and finding better methods of application, and is committed to the study of Rhizobium as an environmentally superior alternative to inorganic fertilizers.

NCGA Applauds Japanese Approval Of Herculex I Insect Protection

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Grain corn containing the Herculex™ I Insect Protection trait has received regulatory committee approvals for food, feed and import into Japan, clearing an important hurdle on the road to commercialization. Leon Corzine, chairman of the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) Biotech Working Group, said Herculex I provides a new option for the nation's corn growers.

"It gives corn growers another choice," said the Assumption, Ill., corn grower. "The Japanese approval of the commercialization of Herculex I will give corn growers another tool in the toolbox for production agriculture. It's good for the environment and will help producers with safety and profitability."

NCGA believes the development of biotechnology offers great promise for corn growers through improved efficiencies and potential profits when managed wisely and with regulatory oversight based on sound science.

Herculex I is the first trait in a new generation of in-plant insect-protection traits for corn. This family of traits is being developed in a research collaboration between Dow AgroSciences and Pioneer Hi-Bred International Inc. Herculex I guards against European and southwestern corn borer and expands protection to include black cutworm and fall armyworm.

Last year, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, the United States Department of Agriculture and the Food and Drug Administration granted full food and feed registration to Herculex I for the United States. Later in 2001, the EPA re-registered Herculex I, along with other Bt corn products.

While registration efforts continue in other major corn-producing and corn-consuming regions of the world, approval by Japan's regulatory agencies for import of this grain marks a major advancement, since Japan is a key destination for U.S. grain.

"NCGA wants to thank Dow and Pioneer for their recognition of our policies in waiting on the commercialization of Herculex I until they received Japanese approval," said Corzine. "We're confident they will continue to work with us as they commercialize new products using our 'Know Before Your Grow' campaign as a model."

For more information on biotechnology and "Know Before You Grow," visit the NCGA Website at http://www.ncga.corn/biotechnology/main/index.html.

NCGA Continues Promotion Of Ethanol Co-Products With Distillers Grains Conference

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Registration is under way for the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) Distillers Grains Conference Aug. 21-23 in Prior Lake, Minn.

The NCGA North Central Distillers Grains Conference, sponsored by the Minnesota Corn Research and Promotion Council, the Wisconsin Corn Growers Association, the Wisconsin Ethanol Promotion Board, the Midwest DDGS Association, is for anyone involved in ethanol co-products fed to livestock and poultry.

Sessions include nutrition reports, first-hand experiences, and future production and market trends of DDGS, said NCGA Livestock Information and Programs Manager Tracy Snider.

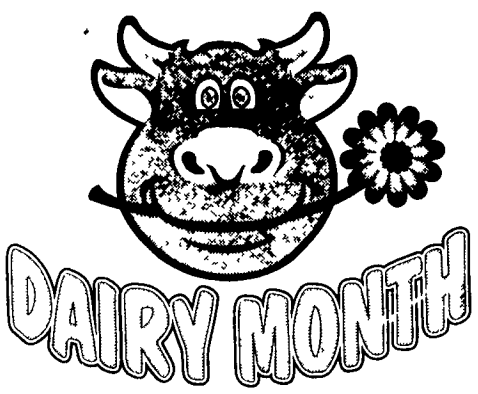
"Managers and supervisors of ethanol processing facilities responsible for the sale and use of distillers grains will find some of the newest information available regarding nutrition research presented at this conference," she said. "Nutritionists and consultants will have the opportunity to discuss consistency and quality of DDGS, as well as question those who have experience with using ethanol co-products."

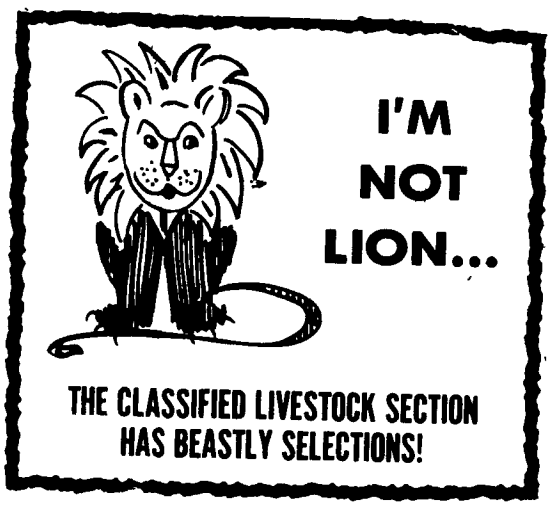
The two-day conference is designed to dispel myths concerning ethanol co-products. "As more farmer-owned dry grind ethanol plants are built," said Snider, "more distillers grains will be available to livestock producers and animal nutritionists. This meeting can instruct those interested how to best utilize this complementary ingredient in their livestock and poultry rations."

Snider said animal nutritionists, feed consultants, commodity marketers, and co-product merchandisers will benefit most from attending.

Attendees can register online at http://www.ncga.research/ddg/form.btm or by contacting Jennifer Mueller at (314) 275-9915, ext. 118 or mueller@ncga-.com. Registration is $150 per person, or $95 per person with a group (two or more) discount before July 19. After that date, a late fee of $50 will be added.

For more information on the conference, visit the NCGA Website at http://www.ncga.com/research/ddg/index.htm.





7-Year Study Reveals Practices To Boost Soybean Yields

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Careful incorporation of inoculants, fungicide seed treatments and reduced seeding rates into a crop production program may give soybean farmers a boost in yield and extra money in their pockets at the end of the growing season.

A seven-year culmination of Ohio State University soybean inoculation evaluations consisting of 40 field trials and over 2,600 plots throughout the state have suggested that yearly seed inoculation can produce profits of 400-500 percent. A yield increase of one-third bushel per acre is profitable and, for many products, a two to five bushel per acre increase is common.

An inoculant is a naturally occurring bacterium that maintains a symbiotic relationship with the soybean plant. The organism, which grows on the plant roots, converts nitrogen gas into nitrate, which the plant needs for growth.

"The soybean plant nourishes the bacterium and the bacterium helps the plant to grow," said Jim Beuerlein, an Ohio State agronomist. "It's a pretty unique relationship and can be profitable for the farmer."

The 2001 soybean inoculation trials evaluated 14 different products at six sites and showed an average yield increase of over 6.5 percent. Profit generated ranged anywhere between $5-$12 per acre.

Improving a crop's health through the use of fungicide seed treatment is another way a farmer can increase profits.

"Farmers need to pay special attention to the diseases they have in their fields and then choose a fungicide package to control diseases for the varieties that may not be resistant to them," said Beuerlein.

Phytophthora, Pythium and Rhizoctonia are three root rot diseases that can cause major crop losses if not adequately controlled.

"Proper variety selection and proper seed treatment can eliminate those diseases as a potential problem," said Beuerlein. Adding fungicide treatment to the inoculated seeds generated additional profits as high as $15 per acre. Results of the inoculation and fungicide performance trials are located at http://www.ag.ohio-state.edu/.

Another way a farmer can save money is to reduce the seeding rate. An Ohio State seeding rate study conducted in 2001 indicated that reducing the seeding rate by 50,000 seeds per acre could potentially save a farmer up to $10 per acre. Study results showed that maximum soybean yields were produced with seeding rates ranging between 150,000-175,000 seeds per acre.

"Farmers tend to plant 25 percent more seed than they need to. Some of that is to compensate for poor equipment or lack of calibration. Some of it is just habit, but some producers feel that the high seeding rates are needed for better weed control," said Beuerlein. "Most people can reduce seeding rate by 25 percent without affecting either weed control or yield and therefore increase profits."

Beuerlein said that proper calibration of equipment to achieve the desired number of seeds planted per acre, or the number of seeds per foot of row, is a very important step in reducing production cost.

Test Drive the New McCormick Today!

A lot has changed since you last drove a McCormick. We've added features and options like a power-shuttle transmission, a one-touch speed sequencer, an independent front suspension, and the quietest, most comfortable cab available. The one thing that hasn't changed is the feeling you get behind the wheel. We invite you to test drive the new McCormick today.

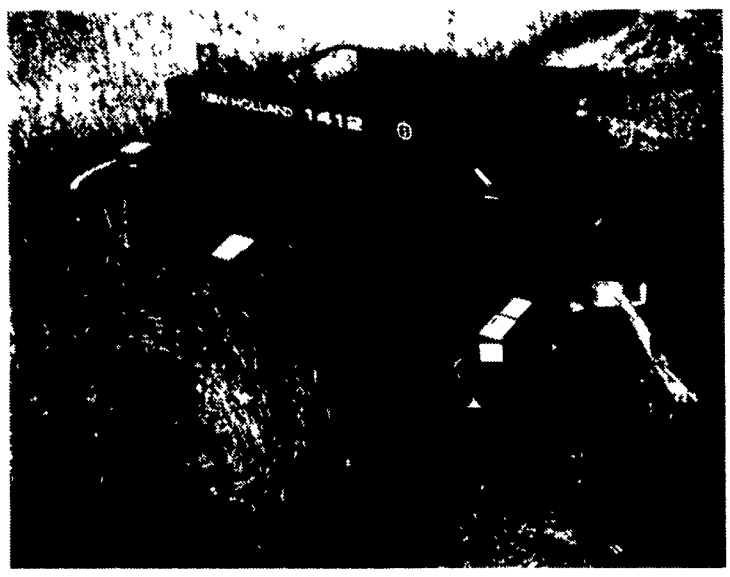
NEW HOLLAND Model 1412 Discbine Disc Mower With Flail Conditioner

Fast, Trouble-Free Cutting... and Flail .Conditioning For Faster Drydown.

Now, get New Holland's popular Discbine® disc-cutting technology teamed with fast-drying flail conditioning. It's all built into the new Model 1412.

The "1412" has an eight-disc modular Discbine cutterbar for cutting through the toughest, heaviest crop quickly and cleanly. The modular cutterbar features individual disc modules with sealed gear cases and independent alloy drive shafts - it's the secret to fast, easy and inexpensive cutterbar servicing.

Flail conditioning system promotes faster drydown so you're able to save valuable time and bale much sooner.

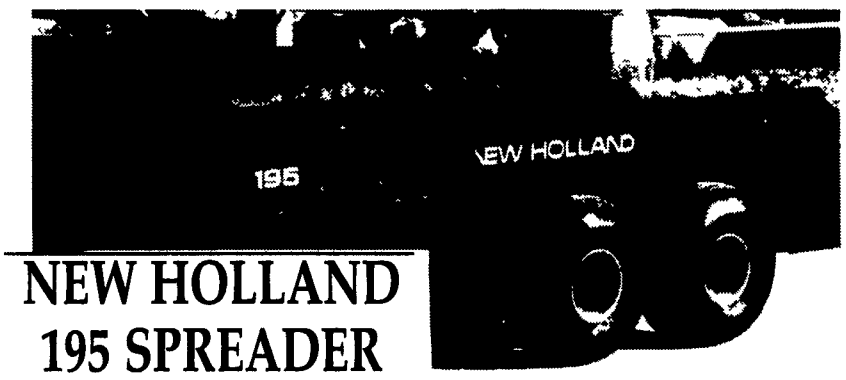


Model 648 Silage Special 4'x5'

Strength and durability are built into every New Holland Roll-Belt™ round baler. Larger chain idler springs to maintain proper tension, beefier bearings for follower rolls and drive rolls, heavy-duty cam-follower bearings in wide pickups, stronger pickup lift cranks, heavy-duty wheel hubs, and long-lasting curved pickup tines - they're just some of the features we've included to make Roll-Belt balers stand the test of time.

Model 570 14x18 Baler

The Model 570 handles high-capacity crops with a 65-inch wide Super-Sweep pickup. Knotters or twisters are gear driven for consistent trouble-free tying.



NEW HOLLAND 195 SPREADER

The Most Reliable, Most Durable Spreader You Can Buy

New Holland box spreaders are the best-selling spreaders in the industry - and for good reason. Known as "Strong boxes," New Holland box spreaders are engineered to perform and built to last. They have the toughest floors and sides of any spreader available. And they're made of special steels that are more corrosion-resistant and stronger than ordinary steels.

B37P Round Bale Wrapper

Expand your forage production system with a New Holland round bale wrapper. By adding a round bale wrapper to your current haying system, you can put up high-quality forage at a fraction of the cost of traditional silage systems.

Wrapping adapts well to any haying system. Both twine-tied and net-wrapped bales can be wrapped for silage. Along with being a low-cost silage investment, wrapping eliminates a need for shed storage space for your hay.

❖ Business News ❖

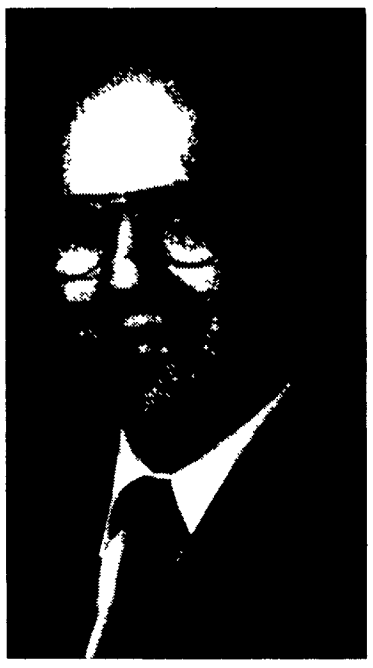
Horst Retires From ENB's Board

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — T. Glenn Horst recently retired from the board of directors of the Ephrata National Bank after serving more than 14 years with that group.

Horst is the retired president of T. Glenn Horst and Sons, Inc., an auctioneering service. He conducted his first sale in 1954 at the age of 22. His father, Titus, started auctioneering in 1932, and his maternal grandfather, A.A Landis, was a turn-of-the-century auctioneer. Sons Tim and Tom Horst make the fourth generation in this auctioneering family.

Beginning in 1953, Horst operated a construction business in the Ephrata area and did auctioneering on the side. But in 1990, as their business grew, the Horsts went full-time into auctioneering. A year later, in 1991, they built Horst's Auction Center at the corner of West Main Street and Durlach Road, Ephrata.

Active in his church and local community, Horst is a member of Ephrata's First United Methodist Church, where he formerly was a church trustee, Sunday School superintendent and song leader. Other memberships include Akron Lions Club, Homebuilders Association of Lancaster County, Historical Society of the Cocalico Valley, Historic Railroad Society, National Auctioneers Association and the Greater Lancaster County Board of Realtors.



T. Glenn Horst

During 1999, Erica served as the vice president of the Pennsylvania Junior Holstein Executive Committee. Additionally in 2000, the National Junior Holstein Association named her a National Distinguished Junior Member Finalist.

Erica Davis

Last summer, Erica interned with World Wide Sires, Ltd. and was responsible for writing feature bull stories, organizing and designing power point presentations and updating their farm tour database.

Additionally Erica has interned with the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture Press Office during the 2000 and 2001 Pennsylvania State Farm Show and interned with Pennwood Farms in Berlin, where she managed pre-weaned calves and milked one of three shifts in a 28-stall parallel rotary parlor.

This fall Erica will be returning to the Pennsylvania State University where she will finish her degree in agricultural science with a minor in agricultural communications.

TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. — The 110 Tractor Loader Backhoe (110 TLB) is the latest addition to the family of John Deere compact construction equipment and is the first product in company history to be developed by all three John Deere Divisions.

Four years in the making and with numerous patents pending, the 110 TLB represents new milestones in design innovation. This powerhouse survived rigorous field-testing and two years of intensive customer feedback. The lighter weight and shorter length of the 110 TLB make it more maneuverable and easier to transport than larger construction units. With a removable backhoe and a wide variety of implements and accessories, the 110 will be a versatile addition to any equipment fleet.

AEM To Host Mini-Ag Conference In Illinois

ROSEMONT, Ill. — The Association of Equipment Manufacturers (AEM) will host a Mini-Ag Conference at the Westin O'Hare Hotel in Rosemont, Ill., July 15 and 16.

The conference program will provide timely information and insight from the equipment industry, government, agribusiness, and agricultural producers on the future demands of ag equipment and the changes taking place in the industry.

Topics to be addressed during the conference include: what is currently happening to agriculture; economic impact that will arise out of the new farm bill; five major trends in production agriculture in North America being driven by environmentalists and social engineers; what's driving the economic value of your company; if all the legislation desired by equipment dealers was passed in all the states and provinces, would anything change about the Bluesteim Report Survey Results and the editorial content of Industry Watch; and the State of the Industry Mid-Year Outlook report.

Activities begin Monday evening, July 15 at 6:30 p.m. with a cocktail/buffet reception. The actual conference program gets under way at 8:30 a.m. on Tuesday morning, July 16.

For more information on the AEM Mini-Ag Conference, contact AEM's Paula Miller at (312) 321-1470, or visit the AEM Website at www.aem.org. The conference is open to both AEM members and non-members.

Metzler Named To First Union's Agri-Finance Board

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — First Union announced recently that Rodney L. Metzler, president of Pleasant view Farms, Inc., has been named to First Union's 15-member Pennsylvania/Delaware agri-finance board of directors.

"First Union is pleased to have this outstanding individual join our agri-finance board of directors," said Darvin Boyd, senior vice president and director of agri-finance. "Rodney Metzler is a successful farmer, businessman, and leader in Morrisons Cove where the family dairy farm is significant. We are excited to have Rodney join our board and represent a geographic area of Pennsylvania where First Union's agri-finance department is committed to serve."

Metzler is also president of Metzler Brothers Transport, vice president of Wineland Equipment, and president of Metzler Brothers Truck and Trailer Sales and Service.

A business and community leader, he is active with the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, the Pennsylvania Holstein Association, Blair County Chamber of Commerce, and the Martinsburg Grace Brethren Church.

Dairyland Seed Introduces "Hi D.F." Silage Hybrids

WEST BEND, Wis. — Dairyland Seed is offering producers silage hybrids bred specifically for nutritional value and yield. Trademarked Hi D.F. (highly digestible forages), these silage hybrids can significantly improve corn silage performance, both in the field and in the feed bunker.

Hi D.F. hybrids have been identified by Dairyland Seed researchers as having improved digestibility relative to standard hybrids. In addition to yield potential, in many instances these hybrids possess a soft kernel trait. This trait provides for more digestibility of the kernel, providing a better feed value.

Kernel density studies at Iowa State University have shown a clear distinction in kernel density between Hi D.F. hybrids and some other standard hybrids. Research by University of Wisconsin scientists Dr. Joe Lauer and Dr. Randy Schaver indicates soft kernel hybrids have more surface area available for digestive enzymes to utilize the starches and carbohydrates in the grain.

Several Dairyland Seed Hi D.F. silage hybrids have shown superior digestibility or superior milk per ton in university trials. Stealth 1297 has recorded outstanding results in both University of Wisconsin and Michigan State University silage trials.

One of the most important aspects of harvesting high quality silage is harvest timing. Most Hi D.F. hybrids feature a longer grain filling period, allowing producers to optimize the feed value of the hybrid they harvest.

Patz Sales Introduces Manure Solutions

POUND, Wis. — Patz Sales, Inc. has announced the introduction of PATZ Manure Solutions, a comprehensive manure nutrient management system. Patz Sales is the first established U.S. manufacturer to bring this technology to North America.

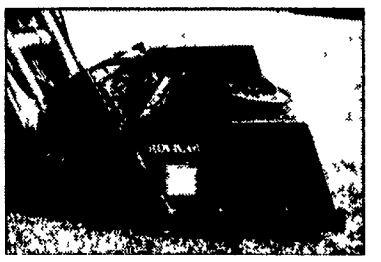
The Manure Solutions system will help dairy producers comply with environmental regulations and implement a manure management plan for their farm.

Manure Solutions will also allow farmers to address odor and runoff concerns, while harvesting the valuable nutrients from manure for their fields.

Landscaping Tool Built For Compact Tractors

JOHNSTOWN (Cambria Co.) — A special Rockaway Landscaping Tool is now available for use with compact tractors. Once installed on the tractor's loader bucket, it attaches easily in minutes and quickly turns rough, rocky ground into a finely-groomed seedbed.

To use the new Rockaway, tractors need to have a hydraulic system capacity of six gpm or more and a remote hydraulic valve is required. Tractors must also be able to move at very slow ground speeds, while maintaining constant engine RPM. Hydrostatic transmissions are ideal.



Rockaway Landscaping Tool

Designed and built by a landscaper frustrated by the cost of replacing chains and slats, Rockaway is very low maintenance — just two greaseable bearings and one roller chain.

Study Shows Storage Cover Reduced Hog Manure Odors By Average Of 45 Percent

DES MOINES, Iowa - A two-year research study funded by the pork checkoff shows that use of a geotextile cover reduced odors from manure storage by an average of 45 percent.

For this research project, pork producers on the pork checkoff's environment committee selected the geotextile cover BioCap, marketed for lagoons and manure storages by Baumgartner Environics Inc. of Olivia, Minn.

"Pork producers used their investment in the pork checkoff to work collectively toward finding ways to manage odors in manure storage," said John Kellogg, a National Pork Board member and a pork producer from Yorkville, Ill. Kellogg was chairman of the committee that decided to fund the BioCap research through the checkoff.

"Through the checkoff, pork producers research products that are marketed as ways to reduce odors," Kellogg said. "Some of the research was in pit additives while this research project was on the geotextile covers."

Geotextile is a nonwoven permeable material made of chemical compounds such as polypropylene. The geotextile cover provides a physical barrier to odorous compounds in manure, minimizing the emissions of these compounds to the atmosphere.

"Odor emissions were reduced by nearly half using the geotextile cover in this study," Kellogg said. "The results may be different in other conditions. Whether or not the odor reduction is enough depends on each individual operation."

The field scale study was conducted on six farms. Three pairs of farms were similar in production capacity, nutrition, and manure storage surface area so that one farm was a control and the other a test for the geotextile.

Pork producers who participated in this checkoff-funded research project described their experiences with the covers:

- "Neighbors say the smell is better after I put the cover on."
- "I think the cover is effective in controlling odor, but we had a hard time making the cover float after the first season."
- "I would probably install a cover again if they could find a better way to access manure for agitation and pumping and make the cover float after pumping."

A lift system was developed for this project. Because of the weight of the cover and worker safety issues with the lift, other agitation solutions should be investigated.

Odor reduction due to the geotextile cover averaged 45 percent during the two-year period. The largest reductions of hydrogen sulfide were in the first year of the test. Hydrogen sulfide concentrations surrounding the basins were nearly always lower around the geotextile-covered basin. Ammonia reductions were minimal.

"The cost of a geotextile cover for manure storage can be several thousand dollars, with additional fees for disposal," Kellogg said. "Over time, this method could be as cost-effective as other methods to control orders. These covers are expected to last three to five years."

When this research project was completed, one of the three covers was removed. The disposal cost to a landfill was approximately $1,800 for a cover that measured 165 feet by 160 feet. The cost for the cover ranges from $0.14 to $0.22 per square foot, based upon the area of the manure surface plus additional material to anchor the cover.

This pork production operation, which markets approximately 5,200 market hogs per year and stores manure in an earthen basin with a geotextile cover, could expect a cost of $0.49 per hog marketed over a three-year useful life of the cover or $0.29 over a five-year useful life, which includes disposal.

What's against soft paint?

In metal roofing and siding some manufacturers use soft pliable paint to prevent cracks. The disadvantage with softer paint is that it scratches so easy Handling during erection, flying debris during storms, children playing against it, etc. can easily scratch softer paint. Scratches on softer paints tend to rust prematurely. Everlast heat forms to prevent this. Ask our competition if they heat form. It's important.

PA farmers have great hay crops with South Dakota alfalfa seed. Painterland Farms, Westfield, PA, John Painter said "The Trask's seed grew extremely well. We recommend it to anyone. It is real leafy and yielded as well as any of the high priced name brand seeds. It cost 40% as much. We planted 294 acres. We intend to plant more this spring. It was exceptionally winter hardy and resisted frost damage. We are very pleased.

Join the numerous farmers in the PA/NY area harvesting superb alfalfa from South Dakota seed
